CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS: BOOK REVIEWS FOR THE JOURNAL OF LAW AND POLITICAL ECONOMY

Book Review Editors: Anna Saunders (ANU) and Carolina Paulesu (UC Berkeley)

The Journal of Law and Political Economy invites submissions for book reviews from scholars in law, the social sciences, and the humanities whose research seeks to expose mechanisms of structural inequality and to promote economic, political, and social justice in domestic, regional, or international contexts. We especially encourage submissions from scholars from the global South and from early career scholars, and we welcome reviews showcasing international scholarship or scholarship produced outside the North Atlantic region. Reviews of scholarship published in languages other than English are also welcome. Book reviews are not subject to the Journal's double-blind peer review process.

BOOK REVIEW FORMATS

For the JLPE book review section, we invite contributions in the following formats (all word counts are exclusive of footnotes):

- Traditional book review: Concise reviews of books published within the past 2 years (no more than 1,500 words). We encourage reviewers to provide critical analysis rather than simply summarizing the book. These reviews do not include a Reference List, and footnotes should be included only where absolutely necessary to substantiate the argument made.
- Review of classic works: Longer reviews (up to 3,000 words) that retrieve and critically analyse classic scholarly writings from an LPE perspective.
- Book review essay: Comprehensive essays (up to 8,000 words) surveying recent research and broader themes in a specific area of LPE scholarship. These essays should offer significant new insights, contribute to scholarly understanding, and propose directions for advancing the field. Review essays may focus on books, articles, or a combination. These essays will be sent to at least one double-blind peer reviewer.

JLPE also publishes book review symposia, or collections of approximately 4-6 book reviews (each up to 3,000 words) providing critical analyses of an important recent book. These are ordinarily solicited by the Journal, but if you wish to propose a book for a review symposium, you can contact the Book Review Editors at the emails below.

ABOUT JLPE

With the conviction that conventional Law and Economics is inadequate to the multiple and overlapping crises of our time, JLPE seeks to promote multi- and interdisciplinary analyses of the mutually constitutive interactions among law, society, institutions, and politics. Our central goal is to explore power in all its manifestations (race, class, gender, sexuality, disability, global inequality, etc.) and the relationship of law to power. Accordingly, JLPE aims to provide an academic and practical resource for, and to foster discussion among, scholars, activists, and educators from countries around the world to build bridges among the diverse groups whose work engages and resists the legal foundations of structural subordination and inequality. JLPE is an open-access, peer-reviewed journal that publishes original articles and book reviews. Our Editorial and Advisory Boards consist of distinguished, nationally- and internationally known scholars drawn widely from law, the social sciences, and the humanities.

STYLE AND FORMAT

Our style sheet is based on the Chicago Manual of Style, 17th edition (including its author-date system for in-text citations) and the ALWD system for primary legal sources. We welcome manuscripts produced in Bluebook or other formats, although we expect authors to conform their manuscripts to our style sheet after acceptance.

HOW TO SUBMIT YOUR BOOK REVIEW

To propose a book review of any type or a book review symposium, please contact either or both of our Book Review Editors: Carolina Paulesu (carolinapaulesu@berkeley.edu) and Anna Saunders (anna.saunders@anu.edu.au).
