EDITORIAL NOTE

The Editors of UFAHAMU would like to encourage your response to any of our articles or to the journal as a whole. We also wish to encourage you to submit manuscripts on any subject related to African Studies, the Black American experience, or experiences of Africans in the United States. Although most of our articles have concentrated on historical and political questions, we strongly encourage original works in literature, geography, art, economics, etc. We very much need this kind of continuing exchange to keep us abreast of the topical and controversial issues concerning Africa and Afro-America today.

We are also interested in receiving your direct responses to the November, 1971 African Studies Association Conference in Denver, and your comments on whether or not there has been any significant change in the structure of African Studies in the United States since the 1969 "Montreal upheavals" and the subsequent creation of the African Heritage Studies Association.

Students, teachers, public and private administrators are encouraged to submit their manuscripts for consideration.

Let us hear from you.
