Report on the Special Hokan Session in Albuquerque, July 1995

Margaret Langdon and William H. Jacobsen, Jr.

U. of California San Diego and U. of Nevada Reno

During the recent Hokan-Penutian Languages Workshop held at the University of New Mexico in July 1995, we organized a special half-day session devoted to discussion of the present status of the still controversial Hokan stock. Participants were asked to share their thoughts on this topic and to supply handouts for distribution at this meeting dealing with such topics as sources of data (published and unpublished) on their language(s) of expertise, and information on pronominal reference and agreement, as well as case systems and expression of grammatical relations.

Several people submitted information for distribution at the meeting, especially some who could not attend. A lively discussion took place some aspects of which are summarized below.

While many questions remain to be answered on the constitution of Hokan (not to mention whether there is in fact such a grouping), there seems to be a consensus that the Hokan hypothesis is a fruitful one. Among the many languages that have been proposed as belonging to Hokan, there are various degrees of plausibility concerning their membership in the stock. Using the phrasing often heard during the meeting, we propose that "If there is a Hokan", then the following languages should be included:

Karuk, Chimariko, Shasta, Achomawi-Atsugewi, Washo, Yana, Pomoan, Esselen, Salinan, Yuman-Cochimí, Seri, Chontal.

Chumash at this point is considered doubtful, an unfortunate situation since it reduces even more the number of true language families where serious work of reconstruction has been and will be done. Coahuilecan is not a true language family, the languages are extinct and the documentation sparse. Subtiaba-Tlappanec is now believed to be Otomanguean, and Jicaque is not well enough documented in the published literature to be included in the core at this point. For those interested in Jicaque, we append to this report a bibliography including some relevant unpublished material by Lyle Campbell.

Note that the only clear sub-groups at this point are Yuman-Cochimí and Achomawi-Atsugewi; none of the other proposed subgroups have been validated.

Langdon informally suggested a north-south chain of Hokan languages sharing a number of grammatical and lexical characteristics to be further investigated, consisting of Pomoan, Yuman-Cochimí, Seri, and Oaxaca Chontal.

While more work on all Hokan languages still spoken is obviously to be encouraged, much philological interpretation also remains to be done on extinct languages. Golla reports that Howard Berman has organized the Chimariko fieldnotes of Sapir for inclusion in a forthcoming volume of the Collected Works of Edward Sapir; the Harrington material on Chimariko remains to be organized and analyzed. Many believe that Chimariko is very important for the understanding of Hokan; in particular, Oswald presented results of the method he has been developing for measuring similarities between pairs of Hokan languages. Pairings of Chimariko with Yuman languages and with Proto-Western Pomoan are among the most promising. See Oswald's paper detailing his method in the Proceedings of the 1978 Hokan-Penutian Languages Workshop; exact reference to this volume can be found in the Bibliography of the Yuman Languages below under Redden, Ed.

Hinton reports there is some hope for a Yana grammar in the not too distant future.

Information on pronominal reference and case systems led to some interesting observations:

1. The northernmost Hokan languages have the most complex pronominal systems; is this an areal feature? This is a problem which might be amenable to internal reconstruction.
2. Except for Pomoan and Yuman, Hokan languages do not have case markers; Washo has some marginal case features. This suggests that case markers may not be a feature of Proto-Hokan. The origin of case markers in Pomoan and Yuman would be an interesting topic for research.

3. Yana and Karuk have inverse markers, which does not appear to be a Hokan characteristic, and may have arisen by contact with and diffusion from Wiyot and Yurok.

4. Washo and some Yuman languages share a plural object prefix of the shape pa-; while this appears to be a recent development in Yuman, other interpretations need not be ruled out.

Marlett and Moser have compiled an impressive contribution on Seri to the forthcoming Intercontinental Dictionary Series, a version of which is included below.

The following materials are appended to this report in the following order:

1. Bibliographical information:

Selected bibliography of recent works relevant to Hokan, by Jacobsen and Langdon.

Publications concerning Washo and Hokan, by Jacobsen.

Bibliography of the Yuman Languages, by Langdon.

Seri Bibliographical Items, Post 1980, by Marlett.

Bibliography of Oaxaca Chontal (Tequistlatecan), by Waterhouse and Langdon.

Bibliography of Jicaque, by Langdon and Jacobsen.

2. Information on pronominal reference and case:

Karuk, by Macaulay.

Washo, by Jacobsen.

Proto-Yuman, by Langdon.

Yavapai, by Munro.

Seri, by Marlett.

Oaxaca Chontal, by Waterhouse and Langdon.

3. Seri contribution to the Intercontinental Dictionary Series, by Marlett and Moser.

We hope to continue discussion of Hokan topics at the 1996 Hokan-Penutian Languages Workshop.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE YUMAN LANGUAGES (1995 update)

Margaret Langdon (UCSD)

This bibliography contains what I believe to be a complete list of publications on Yuman languages, as well as some unpublished material in the Yuman Archives of the Department of Linguistics at UCSD. It also includes some though not all ethnographic works on Yuman peoples; decisions on what to include in this category have been somewhat arbitrary. A bibliography of old word lists on Yuman languages obtained on microfilm from the Smithsonian is appended. Additions and corrections will be gratefully accepted.

 - 1962 The Grammatical Structure of Oaxaca Chontal. Indiana University Research Center in Anthropology, Folklore, and Linguistics Publication 19, supplement to IJAL 28.2. [Based on 1958 Ph.D. dissertation, University of Michigan. [Grammar on tagmemic model, with 4 classes of independent sentence (syntagmeme) types and 2 dependent types with formulas and examples, tagmeme classes, morpheme classes (following Voegelin's numbering system), phonemes, and annotated bibliography giving more sources and other information.]
 - 1967 Huamelultec Chontal. Handbook of Middle American Indians 5. Linguistics, ed. by Norman A. McQuown 349-67. Austin: University of Texas Press. [Simplified version of Waterhouse (1962 above).]
 - n.d.ms Vocabulary (Spanish-Chontal) and texts for SIL archives. [Field work done with May Morrison, data for computer by Waterhouse, computer work by SIL Linguistics Department staff member Ramona Millar.]
- Waterhouse, Viola and William R. Merrifield 1968 Coastal Chontal of Oaxaca kinship. Ethnology 7.190-95. [Technical description of a simple system based on age relative to Ego.]
- Waterhouse, Viola and May Morrison 1950 Chontal phonemes. IJAL 16.35-39. [Phonemes of Lowland Chontal. Presents charts of contrastive consonant classes: obstruents and resonants, lists of words showing distribution of single consonants, lists of consonant clusters, examples of vowels and prosodic phonemes of stress and length, intonation patterns without examples.]

CHONTAL OF TEQUISISTLAN (Tequistlateco)

de Angulo, Jaime and L. S. Freeland 1925 The Chontal language (dialect of Tequististlan). Anthropos 20.1032-52. [Detailed study on European model based on limited data, probably obtained from a female speaker in Oaxaca City, due to unsettled conditions in rural areas. Includes brief texts. Shows distinct differences from both HC and LC (see Waterhouse 1985 below).]

COMPARATIVE STUDIES

- Kroeber, A. L. 1915 Serian, Tequistlatecan, and Hokan. University of California Publications in American Archaeology and Ethnology 11.279-90. [Comparative word lists for demonstration that Seri and Oaxaca Chontal are Hokan.]
- Turner, Paul R. 1967 Seri and Chontal (Tequistlateco). IJAL 33.235-39. [Attempt to show that Chontal and Seri and not related so can't both be Hokan.]
- 1969 Proto Chontal phonemes. IJAL 35.34-37. [Postulates proto phonemic system based on comparison of present systems.]
- 1976 Pluralization of nouns in Seri and Chontal. Hokan Studies, ed. by Margaret Langdon and Shirley Silver, Janua Linguarum, Series Practica 181.297-304. The Hague: Mouton. [Concludes on the basis of phonological, lexical and grammatical comparisons that Seri and Chontal cannot be genetically related.]
- Waterhouse, Viola 1969 Oaxaca Chontal in reference to Proto-Chontal. IJAL 35.231-33. [Describes shifts in Turner's system (1969) based on cognate sets.]
- 1976 Another look at Chontal and Hokan. Hokan Studies, ed. by Margaret Langdon and Shirley Silver, Janua Linguarum, Series Practica 181.325-43. The Hague: Mouton. [Defense of Hokan classification of Chontal and Seri in agreement with Kroeber (1915).]
- 1985 Counting in Oaxaca Chontal. IJAL 51.237-40. [Rectifies omission of numerals from 1962 Lowland Chontal grammar but also adds comparable Highland Chontal forms, and Tequistlateco forms wherever possible.]
- 1985 True Tequistlateco. IJAL 51.612-614. [Shows that Chontal spoken in Tequististlan was distinct from both Lowland and Highland Chontal but closer to Lowland. Based on data from de Angulo and Freeland (1925). A few words were also collected by Waterhouse from an elderly couple in 1959. Language now extinct.]
- Waterhouse, Viola and Muriel Parrott. 1978 Oaxaca Chontal noun inflection and classification. Occasional Papers on Linguistics 2.54-66, James R. Redden, ed. (Department of Linguistics, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.) [Highland Chontal noun classes based on crosscutting lexical criteria of animate versus inanimate, and phonological criteria of free or bound, and consonant or vowel initial; Lowland Chontal has retained only phonological criteria and simplified prefixal system.]
- n.d.ms Person-marking in Oaxaca Chontal. [Both Highland and Lowland Chontal distinguish 2 types of verbs with single participants, other types with 2 or 3 participants, but differ in expression of actor. Single participant verbs distinguish between subject as actor and subject as undergoer. The latter are expressed by object suffixes.]

INTRODUCTION

The papers in this volume were originally presented at the meetings of the Hokan-Penutian Workshops in Eugene, Oregon, July 8-9, 1994, and in Albuquerque, New Mexico, July 5-6, 1995. The 1994 Workshop was held in conjunction with a two-week invitational conference on Comparative Penutian Linguistics (the proceedings of which will be published in a forthcoming issue of the International Journal of American Linguistics) and was organized by the coordinators of that conference, Scott DeLancey and Victor Golla. The 1995 Workshop was one of a series of meetings on Americanist linguistics that formed part of the 1995 Linguistic Institute at the University of New Mexico, and was organized by Victor Golla under the auspices of SSILA.

A special feature of the 1995 Hokan-Penutian Workshop was a half-day session on the Present Status of Hokan Linguistics specially organized by Margaret Langdon and William H. Jacobsen, Jr. A substantial part of the present volume is given over to Appendices containing the bibliographies and short summaries of pronominal reference and case systems that were prepared for this session. Also included is the draft of a lexicon of Seri, prepared by Stephen A. Marlett and Mary B. Moser for Mary Ritche Key's "Intercontinental Dictionary Series," a lexical database designed to facilitate crosslinguistic research. The format of this database is derived from Carl Darling Buck's Dictionary of Selected Synonyms in the Principal Indo-European Languages.

This is the second volume of Hokan-Penutian Workshop Proceedings to be published by the Department of Linguistics, University of California, Berkeley, as one of the Reports of the Survey of California and Other Indian Languages, under the general editorship of Leanne Hinton.
