The nights slide into one another like empties finding their way under the table

Moons grin widens till it engulfs blackness hiding from a host of thirsty stars

Enters and leans in invitation catching bright-eyed a tossing head of recognition

The fantasy lit again an involuntary hand leaves the keys out of reach

Finds embrace across an interlocking table fingers and meeting eyes

Whenever the hand ...

Another night returned from the North and where and where

Waiting again under so many witnesses at last

And for no reason no word exchanged but reading lines and feeling pulse

Somewhere else
but rose in the air and played around our heads

And we were high on nights proximity breathing hard
