Preamble

The Ralph and Goldy Lewis Center for Regional Policy Studies was established in 1988 on the basis of a five million dollar endowment gift from Ralph and Goldy Lewis. With its first grant award for $250,000 from the National Science Foundation, the Center began operation in 1989. The main objective of the Lewis Center is to promote the study, understanding, and solution of regional policy issues, with special reference to Southern California. These important issues include problems of the environment, urban design, housing, community and neighborhood dynamics, transportation, and local economic development.

Originally affiliated with the former Graduate School of Architecture and Urban Planning, the Center is now a vital research arm of the School of Public Policy and Social Research (SPPSR), founded at UCLA in 1994. The School's name change to the School of Public Affairs (SPA) will take effect during fall quarter 2004.

The Lewis Center serves as the focus of interdisciplinary activities involving over 90 faculty members and numerous graduate students from many schools and departments at UCLA. It also fosters links with researchers at other California universities and research institutes on issues of relevance to regional policy. In addition to income from the Lewis Endowment, the Center is supported by private and corporate foundation gifts and grants, individual donors, and research grants from a variety of governmental agencies. The Center's Director works closely with an Executive Committee, and with guidance from an Advisory Council that includes members drawn from both the University and the wider community.

The primary mission of the Lewis Center is to carry out high quality scholarly research on regional policy issues and to insure that the research is accessible to policy-makers, public opinion shapers, and public officials. There are also a number of active programs in the Center that encourage further research, develop interdisciplinary connections, and foster interaction with those involved in policy issues and decision-making in the community at all levels. These programs include:

- ❖ Lectures and seminars
- ❖ Conferences and workshops
- ❖ Award of occasional seed grants for UCLA faculty research
- ❖ Distinguished Visiting Fellows and Visiting Scholars
- ❖ Publication of a series of Working Papers and other publications

Introduction

The academic year 2003-2004 was the fourteenth full year of the Lewis Center's operation. As the Center's activities grow, an expanding number of faculty and students have been involved in its work, and contacts with outside agencies also continue to grow.

The Center's work continued within the School of Public Policy and Social Research (SPPSR), under the leadership of Director Paul Ong. J. R. DeShazo, Assistant Professor, Department of Policy Studies, was re-appointed as the Center's Associate Director.

During 2003-2004, three Executive Committee meetings were held. On October 23, 2003, the Executive Committee met to begin planning for the new academic year and to review the Center's activities and future directions. A lecture series and several workshops were also discussed.

On February 9, 2004, the Executive Committee met to discuss potential new funding sources and ways to strengthen partnerships with other on- and off-campus groups for more interdisciplinary collaborations. In addition, the status of proposal writing activity and upcoming events were also discussed. On May 13, 2004, the Executive Committee met to review the Center's activities and outcomes of proposal writing that resulted in the funding of several new awards and some pending proposals. Two new initiatives were also discussed and approved for a Lewis Center GIS Lab containing data archives to be operational by fall 2004 and a Southern California Survey on issues and attitudes of interest for use by researchers, social scientists and local agencies. We would like to thank Executive Committee members who served through June 30, 2004. (Executive Committee members are listed at the end of this report).

On May 20, 2004, a joint meeting was held at the Los Angeles County Economic Development Corporation with the Advisory Council and the Executive Committee to review the Lewis Center's activities and future directions. Attendees voiced support for the Southern California Survey and agreed to review the survey, suggest questions and issues of interest, and help disseminate information about the survey. We would also like to thank Advisory Council members who served on the Council for their willingness to assist the Lewis Center in its many activities. (Advisory Council members are listed at the end of this report.)

A total of 15 research proposals were submitted to a variety of agencies. Eight of these new proposals were funded, and 7 proposals were denied. In addition, 1 new project was transferred to the Lewis Center from another university, and 2 continuation projects were transferred to the Lewis Center from another UCLA department.

During the year, 10 projects were completed and several others were near completion. Work was begun on 15 newly funded projects and a Lewis Center housing initiative. Newly funded projects included a major multi-year award from the Atlantic Philanthropies and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation for $459,017 to Ted Benjamin and Ruth Matthias (2003) to identify conditions that support continued work in home and community based services/long term care in California. Work was also begun on two major multi-year National Institutes of Mental Health projects transferred to the Lewis Center for a $1,379,903 research grant to Ike Grusky and Naihua Duan (2003) on HIV early detection organization factors, and for a $905,866 AIDS fellowship training grant to Ike Grusky (2003). Several other projects focused on housing, the demographic and economic status of American Indians and Asians in Los Angeles, outreach strategies of Los Angeles cultural institutions, labor and employment. In addition, researchers worked on a Lewis Center initiative on the state of Southern California housing. Several of these projects complemented each other and generated considerable interaction between researchers.

During the academic year, several lectures were sponsored or co-sponsored by the Lewis Center and others on a variety of issues including Southern California's economy, transportation, housing and community development. A one-day workshop was presented on mapping community health using geographic information systems (GIS) in health research and featured leading researchers discussing GIS methods and data, and a demonstration of GIS analytical techniques and software. Workshops sponsored or co-sponsored by the Lewis Center were also held on gathering and using census data, the use of market-based instruments for environmental protection, and international migration. Lewis Center staff and student researchers participated in a presentation to the UC Regents on the socioeconomic status of American Indians and Asians in Los Angeles as part of a UCLA Center for Community Partnerships project.

Karen Umemoto, Assistant Professor in the Department of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Hawaii at Manoa, spent part of 2003-2004 at the Lewis Center as a visiting scholar. Dr. Umemoto conducted research on the challenges and issues facing Asian Americans and Pacific Islander prisoners in their re-entry into local communities. Two post-doctoral scholars joined the Lewis Center during 2003-2004 to work on a new housing research initiative--Michela Zonta (Ph.D., UCLA Department of Urban Planning) and Kim Haselhoff (Ph.D., UC Irvine Department of Political Science).

The Lewis Center sponsored two new student research programs. A student thesis program supported master's student research focused on growth issues in Southern California for second year master's students and resulted in nine awards of $1,000 to $2,600 each. Student reports are on the Lewis Center website <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/studentreports.cfm>. A GIS initiative was also sponsored to encourage graduate students to work on GIS mapping projects to promote the use of spatial analysis and geographic techniques addressing planning and policy questions facing Southern California. The GIS project is at <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/research/GISProject3.pdf>

One new working paper was released during the year, and several project reports, policy briefs and thesis reports were also released. Lewis Center working papers and other publications are listed at the end of this report, and the abstracts and texts of several publications in a PDF file can be downloaded from <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/workingpapers.cfm>. Working papers and other publications are also available on the University of California eScholarship Repository at <http://repositories.cdlib.org/lewis/>.

Critical Planning, a journal of the Department of Urban Planning, published volume 11 in summer 2004. It received funding from the Lewis Center, and contains articles by Department of Urban Planning faculty and students.

Research Activities

Seed Grants:

No new Lewis Center seed grant money was awarded during the year.

Extramurally Funded Research:

- ❖ CalWORKs Data Project: Monitor and Measure Impacts of Welfare-to-Work Program. California Department of Social Services and California Department of Health Services award to Paul Ong, $10,000 (1998). Research partnership with the UCLA School of Public Policy and Social Research to enhance collaborative efforts to analyze and report on various aspects of CalWORKs, California's welfare reform program. Project reports analyze personal characteristics (e.g., age, race, etc.) of working welfare recipients and the characteristics of the jobs in which they find employment. Initial work on this project was completed in June 2000, although the agreement was extended through June 2004.
- ❖ Health Insurance Coverage and Welfare-to-Work. California Health Foundation award to Paul Ong and Shannon McConville, $222,768 (2000), and additional California Policy Research Center (CPRC) award, $46,194 (2001). Survey 1,000 welfare recipients to link recipients to firms where they work or have worked to determine the effects of welfare-to-work on health issues and health insurance coverage for them and their families. Results are of interest to both scholarly and policy audiences, with dissemination through policy briefs and journal articles and also on Lewis Center website <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/reports/CHCFreport.pdf> This project was completed in August 2003.
- ❖ Caregiver Training Initiative (CTI) Evaluation. California Employment Development Department (EDD) award to A.E. (Ted) Benjamin and Ruth Matthias, $599,945 (2001). UCLA and UCSF researchers are evaluating the Caregiver Training Initiative, focusing on the effectiveness of twelve statewide regional collaboratives' strategies to recruit, train, and retain caregivers throughout the state. The evaluation was supplemented with a caregiver labor market analysis. In 2002 and 2003, presentations were given on the program's evaluative findings at the American Public Health Association meetings in Philadelphia and San Francisco, respectively. Program reports are posted regularly on the state's EDD website <http://www.edd.ca.gov> and <http://www.calmis.ca.gov/htmlfile/pubs.htm> (Caregiver Training Initiative (CTI) Reports and Analysis). This project was completed in December 2003.
- ❖ Seeking Spatial Justice: The Resurgence of the Los Angeles Labor Movement. UC Institute for Labor and Employment award to Edward Soja, $15,000 (2001). This project analyzes the recent resurgence of the labor and community movements in Los Angeles and how these movements strategically use regional and spatial ideas in their action campaigns. Attention is also given to the Urban Planning Department's connections to community and labor groups over the past thirty years. A final report is being prepared for publication. This project was completed in July 2004.

- ❖ Putting the Pleasure Back in the Drive: Reclaiming Urban Parkways in the 21st Century. UC Transportation Center award to Anastasia Loukaitou-Sideris, $43,682 (2001). Using Arroyo Seco Parkway as a case study, the study evaluated the prospects for managing existing historic parkways, and investigated the relationship between the physical qualities of parkways, their usefulness as transportation corridors, and their relative safety. This study has resulted in two forthcoming journal articles. On March 25, 2003, the Los Angeles Times also highlighted this project in an article. This project was completed in July 2004.
- ❖ Not All Deaths are Created Equal: Understanding Individual Preferences in Reducing Mortality-Morbidity Rates. National Science Foundation award to J. R. DeShazo, $360,756 (2001) and additional Government of Canada award (Mortality Risk Study), $170,000 (2002). Conduct a random sample of 2,800 adults in the U.S. and a second random sample of 1,000 adults in Canada regarding preferences in reducing premature death through safety and health regulations. The two studies will address a gap in the value of a statistical life (VSL) literature. The National Science Foundation provided an additional $69,552 to continue work on the U.S. portion of the project through November 2005. The Canada project was completed in October 2003.
- ❖ Unlimited Access to Work: An Evaluation of Employee-based Transit Programs. UC Transportation Center award to Donald Shoup, $54,827 (2002). Evaluate workplace transit-pass programs designed for employee user groups: (1) explain how the programs work; (2) examine the programs' effects on employee transit ridership; (3) analyze the programs' effects on transit agency performance; (4) calculate the programs' costs and benefits; and (5) recommend best practice guidelines. The project continues through December 2004.
- ❖ The Long and Short of it: Low Wage Work, Commute Distance and Earnings. UC Institute for Labor and Employment award to Evelyn Blumenberg, $5,915 (2002). This project examines the effect of commute distance and mode on the earnings of welfare recipients and the variation in this relationship across Los Angeles and Fresno Counties. Findings will have implications for the development of policies to address the mobility of low-wage workers through transportation policies, housing mobilities policies, and economic development. The project was completed in October 2003.
- ❖ Nursing Workforce Initiative Evaluation. California Employment Development Department award to UC San Francisco and UCLA, A. E. (Ted) Benjamin and Ruth Matthias, $376,516 (2002). This project evaluates the State of California's Nurse Workforce Initiative (NWI) Program. The NWI was developed to address the current shortage of nurses in California, and new nurse-to-patient staffing ratios, and is designed to increase the nurse population, develop career ladders, and improve work environments. The evaluation will be supplemented with a nursing labor market analysis. The project continues through December 2006.

Research and non-research (training and service) activities during the last year at the Lewis Center were supported, in large part, by public and private agency funding from contracts and grants. The amounts in Figure 1 reflect each year's budgeted spending levels for the last fifteen years.

The last six years represented cycles of increased proposal writing activity by Lewis Center researchers. The dollar amounts shown in the table below differ from those in Figures 1 and 2 because they represent new contract and grant awards resulting from proposal writing activity for each year. In some cases, the funded activity spending shown in Figures 1 and 2 will occur one or more years following the proposal writing activity. The 2003/2004 dollar amount below includes three large multi-year National Institutes of Mental Health (NIMH) awards that were approved for transfers from another campus department and from another university during 2003/2004, with funding for research or training to begin during 2003/2004 and 2004/2005.

*Includes one new award transferred from another university and two continuation awards transferred from another UCLA department.

Fifteen new research projects were begun during 2003-2004 as further described below.

- ❖ The Geography of HIV/AIDS in Asian-Pacific Islander Communities: Risk Behaviors and Organizational Response. UC San Francisco Center for AIDS Prevention Studies award to Lois Takahashi, $25,000 (2003). The goal of this pilot project is to explore the roles of immigration, gender, sexual orientation, and social capital (trust, reciprocity, and civic engagement) in influencing HIV risk behaviors and access to/use of HIV prevention services for Filipino men living with HIV/AIDS in Los Angeles. The results will be used as preliminary data for the development of an R01 proposal to NIH. This project continues through September 2005.

- ❖ Evaluating Privatization as a Government Strategy for Bus Transit in Southern California. Haynes Foundation award to J. R. DeShazo and Hiro Iseki, $68,496 (2003). This study will provide valuable information on the determinants and consequences of privatization of bus transit in Southern California. It will also help transit agency managers and board members learn about issues to be addressed to improve the cost-effectiveness by privatization, and help state and federal agencies increase their capability to design and target their technical assistance and financial support for a more cost-effective provision of transit service. This project will be completed in August 2004.

- ❖ Arts and Cultural Institutions in Los Angeles: Patterns of Utilization. UCLA Center for Community Partnerships award to Douglas Houston, $19,059 (2003). This community outreach project provides a geographic perspective on neighborhood-level usage patterns at art and cultural institutions and ways the art and cultural community can continue to diversify its base of support and visitation. The Los Angeles County Museum of Art, The Museum of Contemporary Art, the Japanese American National Museum, the Skirball Cultural Center, and the Museum of Tolerance participated in this study. This project will be completed in September 2004. A report entitled: “Arts and Cultural Institutions in Los Angeles: Patterns of Utilization” is at <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/reports/MuseumUsage.pdf>.

- ❖ Socio-Economic Status of American Indians and Asians in Educational Attainment, Employment and Home Ownership. UCLA Center for Community Partnerships award to Paul Ong and Melany de la Cruz, $38,562 (2003). This community outreach project provides critical information to American Indian and Asian American communities in Los Angeles County to enhance their ability to formulate sound public policy and improve services. It examined the nexus between human capital, labor-market status, and home ownership factors which are key in defining the socioeconomic status of American Indians and Asians. Work was coordinated with the United Indian Involvement (UAI) and the Coalition of Asian Pacific American Community Development (CAPACD), with a census and spatial data analysis training conducted for community groups in September 2003, a presentation of the findings for the American Indian community partners at a major conference in May 2004, and a presentation of the findings for the CAPACD partners and funders in September 2004. On February 5, 2004, Lewis Center and UCLA Asian American Studies Center researchers participated in a presentation of this project to the UC Regents. This project resulted in a series of four policy briefs on the socioeconomic status of American Indians and a report on the socioeconomic status of Asian Americans in Los Angeles County. It will be completed in September 2004.

- ❖ Wage and Hours Laws Enforcement Study. California Labor Agency award to Paul Ong, $50,000 (2003). This project examines the most effective and efficient means of enforcing wage and hour laws and identifies available federal and state resources that may be utilized to enforce wage and hour laws, including the very low-wage sector where compliance with wage laws may be problematic. Results were prepared for submittal to the California legislature for its December 2003 meeting. The project report is at <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/reports/WagesandHoursFinalReport.pdf>. This project was completed in January 2004.

- ❖ AIDS Research Training Program. National Institutes of Mental Health award to Ike Grusky, $905,866 (transferred 2003 and 2004). A coordinated multidisciplinary predoctoral and postdoctoral research training program on service systems for persons living with HIV/AIDS. This training program is designed and led by HIV scholars from medicine, psychology, public policy, sociology, psychiatry, community health sciences, health services, epidemiology, nursing, and social welfare. The program has successfully recruited and trained a total of 62 students (34 predoctoral and 28 postdoctoral) since its inception in 1989. This project continues through June 2005.
- ❖ HIV Early Detection Organizational Research. National Institutes of Mental Health award to Ike Grusky and Naihua Duan, $2,277,286 (transferred 2003-2005). A study of the organizational factors (structures, processes, inter and intro-organizational relationships) that are associated with HIV testing service delivery outcomes. Detection of HIV is increasingly important given major advances in treatment in recent years. Yet, among seropositive persons at least one-third of adults and 90% of adolescents are unaware of their serostatus. Variations in the organizational contexts and settings in which seropositive and at-risk persons may get tested appear to have a great influence on HIV testing, yet these contexts are rarely studied. To increase early detection of HIV, organizations must increase the percentage of clients offered testing who accept testing, the percentage of high-risk clients tested, the percentage tested who return for results, and the percentage seropositive who are tested and linked to care. This project continues through August 2006.
- ❖ Demographic and Economic Status of American Indian and Alaska Native (AIAN) Children in Los Angeles. American Indian Children's Council and Los Angeles County Children's Planning Council award to Paul Ong, $22,500 (2003). This project produced two reports that contained the findings from an analysis of the demographic and economic status of American Indian and Alaska Native (AIAN) children in Los Angeles based on census data. The reports used 2000 census data to compare: (1) the status of AIAN children in Los Angeles to AIAN children in California and in the United States and (2) the status of AIAN children in Los Angeles over time using 1980, 1990, and 2000 census data. The project policy briefs are at <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/policybriefs.cfm>. This project was completed in December 2003.
- ❖ Death on the Crosswalk: A Study of Pedestrian Accidents in Los Angeles. UC Transportation Center award to Anastasia Loukaitou-Sideris, $37,163 (2003). This research project explores the spatial distribution of pedestrian-automobile accidents in Los Angeles and analyzes the social and physical factors that affect the risk of such accidents. The study identifies major concentrations (regional clusters) of pedestrian collision data in Los Angeles neighborhoods and uses twelve case studies of intersections with a high frequency of pedestrian-automobile accidents. Researchers utilized data from the Los Angeles Department of Transportation, Caltrans, Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG), and the U.S. Census 2000. This project continues through December 2004.

- ❖ Labor Force Expansion through Retention of Related Care Givers. Atlantic Philanthropies and the Robert Wood Johnson award to A. E. (Ted) Benjamin and Ruth Matthias, $459,017 (2003). This project will identify all related workers (family and friends) who are paid with public funds to provide care for people of all ages and disabilities for a 5-year period using data from In Home Supportive Services (IHSS) worker files. Researchers will interview a sampling of the workers who choose to leave or stay in this field of work after their initial service relationship ends. The project will attempt to identify conditions that support continued work in home and community based services/long term care in California in order to develop recommendations and proposals for increasing the supply of home and community based service workers. This project continues through September 2005.
- ❖ Aging Workforce: Trends and Issues for Employers. Human Resources Roundtable (HAART) award to Paul Ong, $5,000 (2003). Demographics associated with aging workforces in the greater Los Angeles Area, California and the U.S. were analyzed in the context of trends and implications for employers from 1980-2010. Findings were presented at HAART's Annual Retreat entitled "Challenges for Emerging, Succeeding, and Thriving in Economic Recovery" during October 2003. The project report is at http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/reports/HARRT\_TechnicalReport100803.pdf.
- ❖ California's Colonias: A Housing Solution or Problem? California Policy Research Center award to Vinit Mukhija, $39,900 (2003). This research will analyze California's colonias and assess the state's policy options and role in the formation of the colonias and their successful upgrading. This will help federal and state governments in determining how to use funding earmarked for upgrading colonia housing settlements that otherwise lack a potable water supply, adequate sewage systems and safe/sanitary housing. This project continues through March 2005.
- ❖ Evaluating the Fiscal Impacts of Privatizing Bus Transit Service in California. California Policy Research Center award to J. R. DeShazo and Hiro Iseki, $39,981 (2003). This project will examine (a) factors that most compel public agencies to privatize, (2) the level of privatized services they choose, and (3) the consequences of decisions by measuring changes in the cost-effectiveness of service provision. Data from the National Transit Database will be used. The study will be used to help policymakers understand privatization as a provision strategy and help government agencies design and target technical assistance and financial support to provide more cost-effective transit service. This project continues through October 2004.
- ❖ Urban Outreach Service Model for Young Seropositive Latino MSM. UCLA School of Nursing Center for Vulnerable Populations award to Ike Grusky, $15,250 (2004). The purpose of this outreach study is to assess the feasibility of a two-part integrated community intervention directed at young (25 and under) Latino men who have sex with men (YLMSM). Part I targets this population at Latino club and event nights and motivates them to go to a service center for HIV testing. Part II is testing and counseling the target population at the service center and arranging an appointment for seropositives to see an HIV medical doctor at a second center. This project continues until January 2005.

- ❖ The State of Southern California's Housing. Two post-doctoral scholars, Michela Zonta (Ph.D., UCLA Department of Urban Planning) and Kim Haselhoff (Ph.D., UC Irvine Department of Political Science), joined the Lewis Center to work on a housing research initiative. The study analyzes Southern California's housing sector, which has been fundamentally shaped by sustained long-term growth over the last half century. Continued population growth combined with a dwindling supply of housing over the past fifteen years has resulted in high housing costs that discourage home ownership and create a heavy financial burden on renters and owners. A report was prepared as part of the Center's collaboration with the UCLA Anderson Forecast's June conference on "When and How Do Real Estate Bubbles Burst? What Today's Buyers and Sellers Need to Know." The Los Angeles Times featured an article on the study on Friday, September 3, 2004 entitled "Study Offers Strategy for Housing Gap." This project was completed in June 2004. The project report is at http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/research/publications/reports/SoCal\_Housing.pdf

- ❖ HIV Prevention Among Filipino MSM Living with HIV/AIDS: Exploring the Linkages Among Social Capital, Access to HIV Prevention Services, and Sustained Risk Reduction Practices in Orange and San Diego Counties. UCLA Center for Community Health/Center for HIV Identification, Prevention and Treatment Services (CHIPTS) award to Lois Takahashi, $29,998 (2004). This pilot project explores the links among HIV risky/risk reduction behaviors, use of HIV prevention services, and social capital for Filipino men who have sex with men (MSM) who are living with HIV/AIDS in Orange and San Diego Counties. The results will be used as preliminary data for the development of an R01 proposal to NIH. This project continues through December 2004.

With the completion of several major projects, renewed efforts are underway to obtain new funding through agency contacts and increased proposal writing activity. The amounts in Figure 2 reflect each year's budgeted spending levels for new and continuing contracts and grants during the last fifteen years.

Figure 2

Funding from research grants has now provided a substantial amount of employment for graduate students and for some undergraduate students. The numbers of students employed by the Lewis Center since it was established are as follows:

Lecture/Seminar Series

The Lewis Center sponsors a lecture/seminar series, as well as special workshops and conferences focusing on Southern California issues in an effort to build bridges to the local community. Lecturers come from within and outside the UCLA community to share research and promote the discussion of timely issues. Regular lectures are open to UCLA and the general public. Where possible, lectures were scheduled as part of a UCLA class lecture. The Lewis Center calendar of events is at: <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/events/events.cfm>. The School of Public Policy and Social Research also has a calendar of school-wide events at <http://www.spa.ucla.edu/main.cfm> (“events”).

During 2003-2004, lectures were sponsored or co-sponsored by the Lewis Center as follows.

- ❖ November 19, 2003: “The Future of California and the Region’s Economy.” This panel featured Jack Kyser Senior Vice President and Chief Economist, Los Angeles County Economic Development Corporation (LAEDC); Ross DeVol, Director of Regional and Demographic Studies, The Milken Institute; James Gosnell, Deputy Executive Director, Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG); Barry Wallerstein, Executive Officer, South Coast Air Quality Management District (AQMD); Cecilia Conrad, Stedman-Sumner Professor of Economics, Pomona College, Claremont Colleges, and as moderator, Dean Barbara Nelson, UCLA School of Public Policy and Social Research.
- ❖ April 22, 2004 “An Interdisciplinary View of Public Transportation and Its Role in Society,” with Lester Hoel, Professor of Engineering, University of Virginia (with UCLA Institute of Transportation Studies and Women in Transportation).
- ❖ May 3, 2004: “Gated Communities and the Politics of Fear,” Setha Low, Professor of Anthropology, City University of New York, (with UCLA Department of Urban Planning).
- ❖ May 6, 2004: Urban Planning Career Night (with UCLA Department of Urban Planning).
- ❖ May 13, 2004: “Social Change and the Housing Market,” Gary Dymski, Professor of Economics, UC Riverside and Director, UC Center in Sacramento (with UCLA Department of Urban Planning). ### Conferences and Workshops

Lewis Center conferences and workshops complement its regular lecture series as further described below.

During 2003-2004, the Lewis Center sponsored or co-sponsored the following:

- ❖ July 22, 2003: Roundtable on “Usage Patterns of Cultural Institutions in Los Angeles County,” Douglas Houston, UCLA Lewis Center. This was part of a Lewis Center project with participants from the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, The Museum of Contemporary Art, the Japanese American National Museum, the Skirball Cultural Center, and the Museum of Tolerance.
- ❖ August 23-24, 2003: Workshop on “Twenty Years of Market-based Instruments for Environmental Protection: Has the Promise Been Realized? (with Donald Bren School of Environmental Science and Management, UC Santa Barbara; UCLA Lewis Center; and Resources For The Future, Massachusetts Institute of Technology). Professors Charles Kolstad and Jody Freeman from the Donald Bren School of Environmental Science and Management led this workshop in Santa Barbara to explore the extent to which economic incentives and market mechanisms have delivered on their promise to produce environmental protection/abatement more efficiently than command-and-control legislation. Participants included economists and legal scholars from around the world, and the proceedings will be published in an edited volume
- ❖ September 16, 2003: Workshop on “Gathering and Using Census Data,” for Asian American and American Indian community groups, Paul Ong, Professor, UCLA School of Public Policy and Social Research and Director of the UCLA Lewis Center, and Melany de la Cruz, Census Information Coordinator, UCLA Asian American Studies Center. This was part of a Lewis Center project with participants from United Indian Involvement (UAI) and the Coalition of Asian Pacific American Community Development (CAPACD).
- ❖ October 4, 2003, HAART 2003 Annual Retreat: “Challenges for Emerging, Succeeding and Thriving in Economic Recovery,” Newport Beach, California. Presentation on “Aging Workforce: Trends and Issues for Employers,” by Paul Ong, Professor, UCLA School of Public Policy and Social Research and Director of the UCLA Lewis Center and Daniel Mitchell, Professor, UCLA Department of Policy Studies. The project report is at http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/reports/HARRT\_TechnicalReport100803.pdf.
- ❖ October 19-21, 2003: “The Transportation, Land Use, Environment Connection--Finance: The Critical Link,” UCLA Conference Center at Lake Arrowhead (with UCLA Extension Public Policy Program and UCLA Institute of Transportation Studies). A summary of the proceedings for this conference are at <http://uclaextension.edu/publicpolicy>.
- ❖ February 5, 2004: UCLA in LA and the Center for Community Partnerships presentation for The Regents of the University of California on Lewis Center project: "The Socioeconomic Status of American Indians and Asians In Los Angeles: Educational Attainment, Employment and Home Ownership," by Melany de la Cruz, Census Information Coordinator, UCLA Asian American Studies Center and Varisa Patraporn, Ph.D. candidate, UCLA Department of Urban Planning.

- ❖ March 12, 2004: The 2004 Frankel Symposium on “Shaping Environmental Policy--Science in Context.” Keynote Address: Dr. Donald Kennedy, President Emeritus and Bing Professor of Environmental Science and Policy Emeritus, Stanford University and. Editor-in-Chief, Science Magazine. Presented by the Evan Frankel Environmental Law and Policy Program, UCLA School of Law in cooperation with the UCLA Lewis Center, the UCLA School of Public Policy and Social Research and the UCLA Institute of the Environment.
- ❖ March 25, 2004: American Community Survey (ACS) Sub-county/Small Areas Definitions meeting with Marge Nichols of United Way and representatives from the U. S. Census Bureau Regional Office, the Southern California Association of Governments, the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, the Los Angeles Department of Health Services, and other local agencies. This group continued to meet monthly during 2004 at UCLA and at other locations to conduct training sessions and discuss proactive ways to work with the ACS data.
- ❖ May 7, 2004: “Mapping Community Health Using Geographic Information Systems (GIS) in Health Research.” Training sessions featured Nancy Krieger, Professor, Harvard School of Public Health and James Christy, Regional Director, Census Bureau, Los Angeles Region. In addition, academic and research users of GIS from UCLA, RAND, and California State University-Fullerton provided demonstrations of GIS analytical techniques and software. A concurrent afternoon Hands-on GIS workshop for Community-Based Organizations was also presented by the UCLA Neighborhood Knowledge Research Center. Co-sponsored with the UCLA Center for Research, Education, Training, and Strategic Communication on Minority Health Disparities.
- ❖ June 22, 2004: UCLA Anderson Forecast on “When and How Do Real Estate Bubbles Burst? What Today’s Buyers and Sellers Need to Know.” A report on “The State of Southern California’s Housing” was prepared for this conference by post-doctoral scholars Michela Zonta and Kim Haselhoff, UCLA Lewis Center and is at http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/research/publications/reports/SoCal\_Housing.pdf. A conference summary is at http://uclaforecast.com/contents/archive/media\_6\_04\_1.asp.
- ❖ June 21-26, 2004: “Summer Institute on International Migration” was organized by Roger Waldinger and Adrian Favell, Professors in the UCLA Department of Sociology. The institute brought together an international, interdisciplinary group of senior and junior scholars for workshops and a conference at UCLA to discuss research on international migration. Several organizations including the UCLA Lewis Center co-sponsored this event. Additional information about the event is at <http://www.international.ucla.edu/migration2004/>.

Visitors to the Center

Karen Umemoto, Assistant Professor in the Department of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Hawaii at Manoa, spent part of 2003-2004 at the Lewis Center as a visiting scholar. Dr. Umemoto conducted research on the challenges and issues facing Asian Americans and Pacific Islander prisoners in their re-entry into local communities. She collected data and worked with research partners in the Los Angeles and San Francisco Bay areas.

Two post-doctoral scholars joined the Lewis Center during 2003-2004 to work on a new Lewis Center research initiative to study housing issues and the state of housing in Southern California. Michela Zonta (Ph.D., UCLA Department of Urban Planning) and Kim Haselhoff, (Ph.D., UC Irvine Department of Political Science) prepared a report on the state of California housing as part of the Center's collaboration with the UCLA Anderson Forecast's June conference on "When and How Do Real Estate Bubbles Burst? What Today's Buyers and Sellers Need to Know." The report is also on the web at http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/research/publications/reports/SoCal\_Housing.pdf.

Lewis Center Publications

One new working paper was released during the year, and several other reports including policy briefs and project reports were also published. Lewis Center publications are listed at the end of this report. Abstracts and the texts of several publications in a PDF file that can be downloaded are at <http://lewis.spa.ucla.edu/publications/pub.htm>. In addition, the University of California eScholarship Repository includes publications and other information at: <http://repositories.cdlib.org/lewis/>.

Critical Planning, a journal of the Department of Urban Planning, published volume 11 in summer 2004. It received funding from the Lewis Center, and contains articles by Department of Urban Planning faculty and students.

Much of the support for lectures, workshops, conferences, visitors, and publications (including working papers) comes from the Lewis Center endowment, with additional funding occasionally provided by other sources. Endowment and other non-contract and grant expenditures are summarized below for the last fifteen years.
