Text by Rufus Isabel Elliot

Program notes

stranger, morning is a setting of text by the same name, by Rufus Isabel Elliot. Gratitude and respect are extended to it for the permission to use the text.

stranger, morning

boyish wrested deserted doubt — the strong pass — that water —

after brutalising —

no water to his towered body
no body to its water towered no body to its

there pissed, snowfield-lit —
when pushed heart plays its wild face,
and he gives my creature on myself (and he leaves his creature on itself).

saw water, and crossing,
and drink with glacier — nothing —
nothing, and raw.

I believed things protect — rather, animals.

Rufus Isabel Elliot, 2020

Duration

c. 9'-10'

Performance notes

The conductor should endeavour to keep the tempo markings in mind as closely as possible; there is a tendency to want to speed up when the marking is continually very slow.

It may help to let resonances from the instruments decay completely before beginning a new phrase. Any stemless passages without the vocalist can be considered free; the conductor should cue the orchestra as to when to start/stop notes.

Black noteheads should be shorter than white noteheads, but they are not required to be exactly half the length or similar.

Sections of the text are shown with double barlines - there should be a pause here, of length marked by the staff e.g., 6", or an attacca marking.

Accidentals specified apply to the rest of the bar, unless otherwise indicated.

To the vocalist

There is Sprechgesang notated in small sections of the score, then a specification Sung to return to normal singing.

Notes without stems indicate a freer length, and providing communication with the conductor is established, can take on any duration you feel is suitable.

Glissando or portamento between notes are to be handled carefully and slowly, gradually sliding up or down between intervals.

The lines in the text are included in the setting for authenticity; these are not to be treated as pauses or rests unless otherwise indicated.

N.B. If any trans singer with a different range wishes to perform this piece, please contact the composer at rylangleave@gmail.com for a transposed score.

To the orchestra

Notes without stems indicate a freer length, and providing communication with the rest of the orchestra/conductor/vocalist is established, can take on any duration the player feels is suitable.

Any stemless passages without the vocalist can be considered free; the conductor should cue the orchestra as to when to start/stop notes.

Black noteheads should be shorter than white noteheads, but they are not required to be exactly half or similar.

Please feel free to stagger breathing on long notes, indicating that you may take breaths, but try not to breathe at the same time as your neighbour.

To the string section

There are several gradations of bow position in the score; in addition to the conventional sul tasto (s.t.) and sul ponticello (s.p.), molto sul tasto (m.s.t.) and molto sul ponticello (m.s.p.) are specified. Arrows between these indicate a gradual shift to that position, and the term ord indicates a return to ordinary bowing.

The term bow ad lib is to describe free bowing, and is negated by the term bow ord.

Similarly, please feel free to stagger bowing on long notes, indicating that you may bow ad lib, but try not to change bow strokes at the same time as your neighbour.

There is one additional bowing specification;

decrease bow pressure to create a soft, airy sound

Vibrato can be used sparingly in the string section throughout, unless otherwise specified.
