African Cup of Nations 2006

The African Activist Association (AAA),
The UCLA African Studies Center
and
UFAHAMU, A Journal of African Studies present

Soccer & Nationalism in Africa UCLA, January/February 2006

From January 20 to February 10, 2006 Egypt will host the 25th African Cup of Nations. In the sprit of this event, the African Activist Association will screen the final matches of the tournament and holding panel discussions on the impact of soccer on nationalism, globalization of the game, and other issues concerning soccer in Africa.

The First African Cup of Nations was held in Khartoum, Sudan in 1957 with only Ethiopia, Sudan, and Egypt participating. South Africa was disqualified because of apartheid and the rest of Africa was still under colonial occupation. Fifty-eight years later, the game is still going strong with 52 independent nations now battling for the final trophy every two years.

The African Cup of Nations has persevered in spite of long odds. With Africa home to most of world's poor, critics felt the money poured into hosting the sporting extravaganza could be better spent on more pressing issues. Nevertheless, despite this criticism, the African Cup of Nations still exists due in large part to the people's passion for the game. This love of football has made Africa the second biggest exporter of soccer players to more lucrative European clubs.

Ufahamu, A Journal of African Studies, is partnering with The African Activist Association in publishing a special edition of Ufahamu showcasing papers presented at the panel events along with papers submitted in conjunction with the Soccer and Nationalism event.

Please check the African Studies website for updates at:

Ufahamu has been an important forum for the publication of materials addressing Africa and the African Diaspora for more than 30 years. Named for the Kiswahili word for understanding and awareness, Ufahamu presents an interdisciplinary dialogue on social, political, cultural and economic issues relating to Africa. Since 1970, the journal has played a significant role in educating readers and creating relevant criteria for African Studies by publishing articles expressing numerous beliefs, thoughts and perspectives by scholars, students and critics.

We encourage our readers to submit poetry, fiction, scholarly articles, commentaries, political or economic analyses, review articles and artwork to the Editors-in-Chief. You may send these submissions to Ufahamu at the above address or we gladly accept and, in fact, prefer to receive electronic submissions. Just attach a Microsoft Word document to an e-mail. Please be sure to provide references for any sourced material. If you plan to submit your material by regular mail, please include three hard copies. If you have any further questions you may contact the editors at ufahamu@ucla.edu or access our website at http://www.international.ucla.edu/africa/ufahamu/.

Since we publish three issues per year, we continuously accept submissions. Though we occasionally publish special, thematic issues, most issues treat a broad range of topics. So, please, feel free to submit all of your African-related work.
