Californians consider abortion an important issue in this year's election; Voters appear ready to approve Proposition One.

by Mark DiCamillo, Director, Berkeley IGS Poll
(c) 415-602-5594

Eight in ten California voters (81%) consider abortion to be of importance to them when voting in this year's Congressional and other state and local elections. In particular, 63% rate the issue "very important." In addition, 71% say they would vote Yes on Proposition One, a constitutional amendment on the November statewide election ballot that would prohibit the state from denying or interfering with a woman's right to an abortion and guarantees access to contraceptives.

Two-thirds of the state's voters (68%) disapprove of the U.S. Supreme Court decision to overturn Roe vs. Wade and grant individual states the right to limit or ban abortion, with 60% disapproving strongly.

Also, by a 65% to 29% margin Californians support new policies recently passed by the state legislature and signed into law by Governor Gavin Newsom which aim to assist women in other states to obtain an abortion in California.

A similarly large majority of voters (66%) also express concern that given the High Court's recent actions on the issue of abortion, it will begin to reconsider other past rulings on social issues, such as those protecting contraception rights and same-sex marriage.

In each instance nearly all major segments of the registered voter population side with the majority pro-choice views on abortion, except for the state's Republicans and conservatives.

These are the findings from the latest statewide Berkeley IGS Poll administered online in English and Spanish August 9-15, 2022 among 9,254 California registered voters.

IGS co-director, G. Cristina Mora, notes that the findings "show that the majority of California voters disagree with the Supreme Court's recent ruling and approve of measures that would help to safeguard women's rights in the state."

Voters overwhelmingly back the state's constitutional amendment on abortion rights

The November statewide election will feature a constitutional amendment, Proposition One, placed on the ballot by the legislature, that would prohibit the state from denying or interfering with a woman's right to an abortion and guarantees access to contraceptives.

When read a summary of the ballot measure, seven in ten registered voters (71%) say they would vote Yes to approve the amendment while 18% would vote No. Support spans virtually all major regions and demographic subgroups of the registered voter population. The only segments opposed are Republicans and strong conservatives.

Two-thirds of voters (68%) disapprove of the recent Supreme Court decision overturning Roe vs. Wade and granting individual states the right to limit or ban abortion, 60% strongly.

Views about the ruling are highly partisan and ideological. Greater than eight in ten Democrats and liberals strongly disapprove of the ruling, while large majorities of Republicans and conservatives support the decision. Broad support for newly passed laws assisting women in other states to get abortions in California

In response to the High Court's ruling, Governor Gavin Newsom and the state legislature recently approved new laws aimed at assisting women in other states to obtain an abortion in California. When asked their reaction to these laws, voters are supportive 65% to 29%.

The division of responses is similar to those of the poll's other abortion-related questions, with majorities across nearly all major regions and demographic subgroups approving the new laws, with the only exceptions being Republicans and conservatives.

About the Survey

The findings in this report are based on a Berkeley IGS Poll completed by the Institute of Governmental Studies (IGS) at the University of California, Berkeley. The poll was administered online in English and Spanish August 9-15, 2022, among 9,254 California registered voters. Funding for the poll was provided in part by the Los Angeles Times.

The Berkeley IGS Poll is administered by distributing email invitations to stratified random samples of the state's registered voters. The latest poll also included an oversampling of registered voters in Los Angeles County, administered using the same methods, to enable the poll to examine specific issues of interest to voters in Los Angeles and to the Times. After the completion of data collection, the results were weighted to realign the Los Angeles County oversample to its actual share of the statewide registered voter population.

Each email invited voters to participate in a non-partisan survey conducted by the University and provided a link to the IGS website where the survey was housed. Reminder emails were distributed to non-responding voters and an opt out link was provided for voters not wishing to receive further email invitations.

Samples of registered voters with email addresses were provided to IGS by Political Data, Inc., a leading supplier of registered voter lists in California and were derived from information contained on the voter registration rolls. Prior to the distribution of emails, the overall sample was stratified by age and gender to obtain a proper balance of survey respondents across major segments of the registered voter population.

To protect the anonymity of survey respondents, voters' email addresses and all other personally identifiable information derived from the original voter listing were purged from the data file and replaced with a unique and anonymous identification number during data processing. In addition, post-stratification weights were applied to align the sample of registered voters responding to the survey to population characteristics of the state's registered voters.

The sampling error associated with the results from the survey are difficult to calculate precisely because of sample stratification and the post-stratification weighting. Nevertheless, it is likely that findings based on the overall sample of registered voters are subject to a sampling error of approximately +/-2 percentage points at the 95% confidence level, while the estimated sampling error of results from the random subsample is +/-2.5 percentage points.

Question wording

(ASKED OF A RANDOM SUBSAMPLE OF 4,595 REGISTERED VOTERS STATEWIDE)

How important are each of the following issues to you when thinking about the candidates that you might support for Congress and other state and local offices in the November general election? Abortion.

(ASKED OF THE OVERALL SAMPLE OF 9,254 REGISTERED VOTERS STATEWIDE)

In the November election, California voters will be asked to vote on Proposition One, a statewide constitutional amendment having to do with abortion rights. It reads as follows: “The state shall not deny or interfere with an individual’s reproductive freedom in their most intimate decisions, which includes their fundamental right to choose to have an abortion and their fundamental right to choose or refuse contraceptives.” If you were voting today, would you vote YES or NO on Proposition One?

Do you approve or disapprove of the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision on abortion that overturned Roe vs. Wade and said that individual states may limit or ban abortions?

In response to this U.S. Supreme Court ruling, Governor Gavin Newsom and the California state legislature passed several new laws that would assist women living in other states to obtain an abortion in California. Do you approve or disapprove of these new laws?

How concerned are you that now that the U.S. Supreme Court has overturned Roe vs. Wade, it will reconsider other past rulings that protect contraception rights and same-sex marriage?
