

UCLA
California Policy Options

Title

Author's Biographies

Permalink

<https://escholarship.org/uc/item/6wx892k2>

Publication Date

2000

Authors

Rosina M. Becerra is a professor of social welfare and policy studies at UCLA and former director of the Center for Child and Family Policy Studies. She is principal investigator for a five-year evaluation of the California Work Pays Demonstration Project, which was designed to move people off welfare.

E. Richard Brown is the director of the UCLA Center for Health Policy Research, and is a professor of public health in the UCLA School of Public Health. The UCLA Center for Health Policy Research, which he founded, has developed into a leading national health policy research center and one of the most important sources of health-related information analysis on California's population.

Werner Z. Hirsch is professor of economics at UCLA and has been the founding director of public policy institutes at two universities. Dr. Hirsch has served on numerous boards, committees and councils and in an advisory capacity to various federal, state and local governments in the United States, as well as international agencies and the RAND Corporation.

Xandra Kayden is a senior fellow and adjunct professor in policy studies at UCLA and president of the Los Angeles League of Women Voters and consultant on urban affairs. She is a regular contributor to the opinion section of The Los Angeles Times on government and ethnic relations. Her last book is Surviving Power (The Free Press).

Mark A.R. Kleiman is a professor of policy studies at UCLA. He is author of Against Excess: Drug Policy for Results (Basic) and editor of the Federation of American Scientists' Drug Policy Analysis Bulletin. Dr. Kleiman is also the president of the BOTEC Analysis Corporation.

Tom K. Lieser is executive director of The UCLA Anderson Forecast and authors the quarterly UCLA Anderson Forecast for California. Dr. Lieser has written a number of studies focusing on business trends in California's principal regions and industries and has over 20 years experience as a corporate economist.

Mayda Portillo is administrative assistant to the budget director at Mayor Richard Riordan's office. She received a bachelor's degree in history from UCLA where she minored in public policy.

Philip J. Romero is dean of the Lundquist College of Business at the University of Oregon. In the 1990s, he served as chief economist and deputy cabinet secretary to the governor of California.

Eileen A. Roush is senior consultant to the California Assembly Revenue and Taxation Committee and has taught in the Public Policy and Administration masters program at California State University, Sacramento.

Fernando Torres-Gil is associate dean and professor of Social Welfare and Policy Studies at the UCLA School of Public Policy and Social Research. Dr. Torres-Gil is director of the UCLA Center for Policy Research on Aging and was Assistant Secretary on Aging in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Valentine M. Villa is an adjunct assistant professor of the Department of Social Welfare and associate director of the Center for Policy Research on Aging at the UCLA School of Public Policy and Social Research. Dr. Villa's area of research is documenting the health and economic status of minority elderly populations and examining the differential impact that public policy can have across minority and low-income populations.