ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The UCLA Historical Journal is pleased to be able to present a professional publication containing three outstanding full-length articles, two superb "Notes and Documents," and a number of excellent book reviews on a myriad of worthwhile topics. This substantive expansion of our contents is due primarily to the record number of high-quality manuscripts submitted to us this year. Hopefully there will be something of interest for each reader, and in order to continually improve the quality of our Journal, I eagerly solicit your comments on Volume 8- as well as your manuscripts for Volume 9.

It is a distinct honor and privilege for me to acknowledge the selfless and outstanding service rendered by a number of our staff members and other staunch supporters over the past year. Managing Editor Armando Pimentel has adroitly completed the multitude of administrative and financial matters associated with such a publication, thus freeing me from the fetters of minutiae. Armando has been a right-hand man second to none. Book Review Editor G. Mick Smith has done a superlative job in establishing an excellent rapport with a number of publishers, which has made an excellent rapport with a number of publishers, which has made books readily available for our reviewers. I am also grateful to Professor Albion M. Urdank, our Faculty Adviser, for his insightful advice and sustained encouragement. The position of Editor-in-Chief is no sinecure, but the collective support, wisdom, and enthusiasm of all staff members has made my tenure a pleasant learning experience rather than a burden.

For the fifth consecutive year, the Editorial Board is pleased to be able to offer the Theodore Saloutos Award for the outstanding article in the Journal. We would particularly like to thank Mrs. Saloutos for her financial and morale support, which not only makes this award possible but also- along with funding from the UCLA Graduate Students Association- greatly aids in defraying the rising cost of publication.

Continuity is of prime importance in a graduate student publication. The staff cooperation and scholastic excellence established over this past year is sure to be continued by G. Mick Smith, our Editor-in-Chief for 1988. I wholeheartedly with him, and all of next year's staff, the very best for continued success.
