A Selective Bibliography of the California Indian, with Emphasis on the Past Decade<sup>1</sup>

IMRE SUTTON

Any researcher who comes to the literature of the California Indian intent on preparing yet another bibliography confronts a consistent dilemma: what to include or exclude. To be sure, literature abounds, for the California Indian remains a viable subject not only for anthropologists but for historians, ethnohistorians, geographers and other scholars. In the 1970s several scholars produced bibliographical or documentary studies and these form the foundation of this listing. Grouped around somewhat traditional headings, the bibliography focuses on disciplinary and interdisciplinary writings mainly in the social sciences; I have excluded studies in physical anthropology, fiction, literary essays and poetry. I have also omitted references to foreign language sources. Moreover, because they are too numerous to cite herein, I have identified only a handful of the master's theses produced in departments of anthropology, geography and history at all campuses of California State University and the University of California.

Although the intent emphasizes the past ten years or so, at times I have dipped into the literature of the entire 1970s, especially when studies appear in less well known publications. On the other hand, to some extent I have tried to avoid duplicating some references appearing in the articles in this symposium or the book review section. Many of the items are, themselves, excellent bibliographical sources (e.g., California, vol. 8 of the Handbook of North American Indians [1978]). Moreover, some citations cover a larger universe than California, but are cited because they contain many applicable entries for the time period.<sup>2</sup> In no way is this bibliography exhaustive within any heading, and some topics are regrettably lacking.<sup>3</sup>

MISCELLANEOUS

Ongoing/in press: When known, I have indicated a few specific titles. For example, under the title "The Indians of North America," Chelsea House [5068B West Chester Pike, Edgemont,

PA 19028] will be publishing at least four volumes relating closely to California:

- Lowell J. Bean, The Cahuilla
- Robert L. Bee, The Yuma
- Odie Faulk, The Modoc
- Robert O. Gibson, The Chumash

Various Subjects:

- 1985 Donna Fitzpatrick, "Field-Dependent and Field-Independent Cognitive Styles in Native American Indian and Non-Indian Students," [Miwok Indians], Master's thesis, California State University, Hayward.
- 1985 Annegret Ogden, "Theodora Kroeber Quinn (1897-1979) on California Indians and Anthropologists," The Californians 3(6): 6-7.

NOTES

1. Many thanks to George Phillips, Professor of History, University of Colorado; Albert Hurtado, Assistant Professor of History, Arizona State University, Tempe; and David Hornbeck, Professor of Geography, California State University, Northridge, for review of the entire bibliography; to Constance Cameron of California State University, Fullerton, Anthropology Department, for review of the archaeology section; to the numerous reference librarians and assistants at the several campuses of the California State University and the University of California for research assistance; and to Marte Fuller for ably typing and editing the manuscript.

2. For example, Francis P. Prucha's bibliography (1977) under Ethnohistory and Sutton's bibliography (1975) under Land Tenure.

3. There is little in print on the urban California Indian. For example, James

A. Bohland, in "Indian Residential Segregation in the Urban Southwest: 1970-1980," Social Science Quarterly 63(4) (1982): 749-761, includes discussion of Indians in Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Diego, San Francisco and San José, but he does not distinguish California from other Indian groups.

4. The Clearwater Publishing Company, N.Y.C. (sold to CIS, Washington, D.C., November 1987), published in microfiche the entirety of the land claims cases for California, including Indians of California v. United States (which contains the earlier case before the court of Claims, K-344); as well as separate fiche for Chemehuevi, Mission, Mohave, Pit River, Shasta, Washoe, Yana, Yokiah and Yuchi, as well as for adjacent Great Basin bands.
