Reel 40

Content: 56 entries. This reel is mostly just a copy of Harrington's draft "dictionary" material from Reels 38-39, and here we have included only what appear to be a few additional notes about Mutsun in between the recopied parts.

Various grammatical forms of words, actions as statements and command forms (to bathe, I bathe, we are bathing, go bathe yourself! etc); descriptive terms for people and objects; terms and phrases related to food.

Page numbers: For entries 1-49, add 10 to the page number listed after "Source" to get the online Smithsonian page numbers. For entries 50 to the end, add 11.

Harrington's rehearings of Arroyo's 'Vocabulario' (Reels 41-43)

Content: 10038 entries. Harrington's rehearing of Arroyo's sentence collection (Vocabulario), including discussions Doña Solarsano and he had while talking about the words and sentences.

Many descriptive phrases, such as 'to be big lipped,' to be painted' etc.; words for birds and other animals, and phrases or words related to hunting and subsistence; various short daily-use phrases, statements, questions, and commands; terms for people, such as boy, girl, woman etc.; some terms for jewelry, clothing and accessories; many entries refer to rain. Overall, very general set of words and sentences for expressing many ideas in the language.

Page numbers: For all entries on Reels 41 and 42, add 10 to the page number listed after "Source" to get the online Smithsonian page numbers. For Reel 43, for entries 8321-8325, add 9. For entries 8326 to the end, add 10.

Research notes: The previous page (0496a) contains this: "Tapeistes were made by erecting poles & roofing them over at the siembras where the fields were for keeping the blackbirds, etc., off the crops, they sleeping there and using londas for killing the birds, & there were some men so good to throw that it was as good as a rifle shot. Many of them in the llano of S. Juan 6 ft. high corn. The land antes was fertil, descansada, they just sembraban munchá puro lollito, corn, etc. of every kind, & it grew as good as if plowed. How they sowed watermelons, melones. Also made another kind of tapeistes, height of bed from floor & peeled willow poles, so se quedaron bien pelados, & (cont. on 0497a) the cross beams were 1 1/2 " diam, barkless poles of willlow, side by side, and tied at the ends with rawhide thongs, & used many zaleas on the beds. Some'?' wide enough for 2, while children slept elsewhere. But l the houses had blankets, woven in the mission telar. the "springs" always atraveado, not lengthwise. Had only 4 corner posts, 4 " diam. & buried in the ground, horquetas at top, & the edge poles gruesos too. (0496b) tapeiste is also a stretcher for the sick, 4 men carried such a tapeistito. made of palitos de sauz. 2 men had had to bring muertos with ends of tapeiste on shoulders from far to bury them in the sacred ground of the mission. H. notes " nesc. (doesn't know) tá«nkihné. (así van a hacerle cuerdo, they will make the boy tough by too much whipping)."
