JOURNAL OF
American Ethnic History

JOURNAL OF AMERICAN ETHNIC HISTORY is the premier publication of studies on the ethnic complexity of North America. Choice calls JAEH "a core journal of American historical studies." Well-crafted articles, review essays, and book reviews address various aspects of American immigration and social history including the background of emigration, ethnic and regional groups, native-Americans, immigration policies, and the processes of acculturation. JAEH, published biannually by Transaction Periodicals Consortium, is the official journal of the Immigration History Society.

Articles of enduring interest already published on:

ADJUSTMENT AND ASSIMILATION • John Higham discusses the problem of assimilation in nineteenth century America • Mark K. Bauman and Arnold Shankman offer a case study of the rabbi as ethnic broker • Raymond A. Mohl uncovers cultural pluralism in immigrant education.

THE PROCESS OF MIGRATION • Rudolph J. Vecoli traces the formation of Chicago's "Little Italies" • June Granatir Alexander on chain migration and patterns of Slovak settlement in Pittsburgh.

IMMIGRATION POLITICS • Lawrence H. Fuchs compares the immigration reforms of 1911 and 1981 • David Reimers focuses on the 1965 immigration act and its effect on Third World immigration

ETHNIC CULTURE • Donna Gabaccia examines kinship, culture, and migration patterns • Rowland Berthoff on Scottish-American culture.

GROUP IDENTITY • Béla Vassady, Jr. reveals how homeland ties are stimulants to ethnic unity • James M. Bergquist examines German communities in nineteenth century American cities • Karel D. Bicha on stereotyping the Slavic immigrants.

ETHNIC STUDIES • John Higham on current trends in the study of ethnicity • Moses Rischin analyzes Crèvecoeur's "New Man" • Nathan Glazer reevaluates Beyond the Melting Pot.

Ronald H. Bayor (Georgia Institute of Technology) is editor of JOURNAL OF AMERICAN ETHNIC HISTORY

SPECIAL BONUS • Subscription to JAEH includes membership in the Immigration History Society and the biannual Immigration History Newsletter featuring information on research, organizations, meetings, and publications in the field of immigration history.

Hounds of the Road
A History of the Greyhound
Bus Company

Carlton Jackson

Greyhound, the most enduring bus system in the United States, had its origins in the frigid climate of northern Minnesota in 1893. The history of the company is a fascinating and amusing tale. It is also an important cultural document. Professor Jackson has written a balanced, informative and as-accurate-as-possible social history of the Greyhound Corporation.
