

NON-ROYAL SELF-PRESENTATION

تمثيل الذات غير الملكية

Hussein Bassir

EDITORS

ANNE AUSTIN
Editor, Individual and Society
University of Missouri-St. Louis, USA

WILLEKE WENDRICH
Editor-in-Chief
University of California, Los Angeles

SOLANGE ASHBY
Editor Nubia
University of California, Los Angeles

MENNAT –ALLAH EL DORRY
Editor, Natural Environment
Ministry of Tourism and Antiquities, Egypt

WOLFRAM GRAJETZKI
Editor, Time and History
University College, London, UK

JUAN CARLOS MORENO GARCÍA
Editor, Economy
CNRS, UMR 8167 (Orient & Méditerranée),
Sorbonne Université, France

RUNE NYORD
Editor History of Egyptology
Emory University, USA

TANJA POMMERENING
Editor, Domains of Knowledge
Johannes Gutenberg-Universität Mainz, Germany

ANDRÉAS STAUDER
Editor, Language, Text and Writing
École Pratique des Hautes Études,
Université Paris Sciences et Lettres, France

Short Citation:

Bassir 2021, Non-Royal Self-Presentation. UEE.

Full Citation:

Bassir, Hussein 2021, Non-Royal Self-Presentation. In Anne Austin and Willeke Wendrich (eds.), UCLA Encyclopedia of Egyptology, Los Angeles. ISSN 2693-7425
<http://digital2.library.ucla.edu/viewItem.do?ark=21198/zz002kp443>

NON-ROYAL SELF-PRESENTATION

تمثيل الذات غير الملكية

Hussein Bassir

Nichtkönigliche Selbstdarstellung
Auto-représentation non-royale

In ancient Egypt the primary intention of creating textual self-presentations—or self-portraiture in words, similar to that in paintings, statuary, and reliefs—was to present the explicit characteristics of protagonists in a corresponding fashion, introducing their values and effectiveness to live and rejoice in immortality, both in the afterlife and in the consciousness and thoughts of Egypt’s subsequent generations. The practice of self-presentation was rooted in Egyptian literature from at least the Third Dynasty, and through the course of dynastic history, it differed in aspect, composition, and theme. Self-presentations show the lives of the elites, vividly portraying their beliefs, culture, and expectations for the afterlife. The relationship between royalty and nobility in self-presentations is alluring and informative and compels us to envision the times and the circumstances in which they were created. These texts also make explicit their owners’ wish to be remembered—not forgotten—after death. The presentation of the non-royal self in ancient Egypt represents a window into its culture and historical periods.

في مصر القديمة، كان الغرض الأساسي من وراء كتابة نصوص تقديم الذات - أو تصوير الذات بالكلمات، على غرار ذلك الموجود في الأعمال الفنية مثل النقوش واللوحات والتماثيل - هو تقديم الخصائص الواضحة للشخصيات بطريقة مناسبة لتقديم قيمهم وفعاليتهم؛ كي يعيشوا ويسعدوا بالخلود، سواء في الحياة الأخرى أو في وعي وأفكار الأجيال اللاحقة في مصر. لقد كانت ممارسة تقديم الذات متجذرة في الأدب المصري، منذ عصر الأسرة الثالثة على أقل تقدير، وخلال عصور الأسرات المصرية، غير أنها اختلفت في الشكل والتأليف والمضمون. وتُظهر نصوص تقديم الذات حياة الصفوة، وتصور بوضوح معتقداتهم وثقافتهم وتوقعاتهم عن الحياة الأخرى. وتعد العلاقة بين الملوك والنبلاء في نصوص تقديم الذات ممتعة وغنية بالمعلومات، وتدفعنا إلى تصور العصور والظروف التي تمت كتابتها فيها. وتوضح هذه النصوص أيضًا رغبة أصحابها في أن يتذكروا - لا يُنسوا - بعد الموت. ويمثل تقديم الذات غير الملكية في مصر القديمة نافذة على ثقافة مصر وعصورها التاريخية.

In ancient Egypt the presentation of the non-royal self in writing (see Olshen 2001) was the primary literary tradition through which non-royal individuals aimed to reveal their identity and leave their impressions on time in order never to be forgotten and to secure an eternal existence in the afterlife (see Ames 2001). The non-royal life-writing tradition has witnessed several attempts by modern scholars to define the various forms that protagonists used to express themselves. The best-known descriptive terms for this literary form are “autobiography,” “biography,” and “self-presentation.” In order to lead us to the appropriate term for this genre in Egypt, it is necessary to first define these terms and their application to ancient Egyptian literature (see Gnirs 1996, 2001).

Defining the Genre

Autobiography (see Jolly 2001: ix), according to Gunzenhauser (2001: 75), “is a self-produced, non-fiction text that tells the story of its writer’s life.” Etymologically, autobiography is a Greek term, literally meaning “self-life-writing” (Olney 1980: 6). However, as Greenstein (1995: 2421) points out, “there is no autobiography as such in the ancient world, if we describe ‘autobiography’ as the retrospective interpretation of the author’s own life—a contemplative self-scrutiny of the past.”

Biography, according to Hoberman, “is a notoriously difficult form to define because it borrows from and overlaps with other genres” (Hoberman 2001: 109). That implies that biography is written by a biographer, and not by the protagonist. Lichtheim (1988: 2) declares, “In Egypt the genre ‘biography’ did not develop at all.” She further states, “Biography and autobiography are not necessarily interrelated.” By ‘biography’ the present author refers only to the text, and not to the entire self-presentation, which is multilayered, concerned with text, image, architectural setting, archaeological context, and many wider issues and media than the limited scope of the textual biography tradition.

Although ancient Egyptian biographies were similar to autobiographies according to our understanding of the term, Perdu (1995: 2243) denies the existence of biography in ancient Egypt, but maintains that autobiographies are “well attested” (see Naguib 1997). Perdu’s opinion is not new; Lichtheim previously made the same point, stating, “If autobiography is the narration of bits of one’s life from a position of self-awareness and reflection, then ancient Egyptian autobiographical inscriptions were true autobiographies” (Lichtheim 1988: 2).

Although almost all ancient Egyptian biographies were written in the first person, it is not known whether the protagonists themselves dictated their textual content or one of their family members dictated it on their behalf. Based upon this misunderstanding or assumption, both titles are commonly used: “autobiography,” though we may not be certain whether the work’s author was in fact the protagonist, and “biography,” though we may not be certain of who actually wrote the work—the protagonist or someone else. Baines (2004: 34) prefers to employ the term “self-presentation,” rather than autobiography or biography.

The self-presentation of non-royal members of the elite through image and text, as a form of artistic and textual expression, was the oldest, most widespread, and most significant component of high culture in ancient Egypt from the Old Kingdom, if not earlier, until the Ptolemaic and Roman Periods. The elements of self-presentation varied according to the titles, professions, and background of the protagonists, and according to the reign of the ruler under whom the protagonists served, but they all focused on the meanings and history of self in the telling of a life story. Self-presentations were inscribed on statues, stelae, tomb and temple walls, and coffins.

Egyptian self-presentations exhibit a holistic approach (Assmann 1996: 55-56, n. 4; Simpson 1982; Assmann 1987; Lichtheim 1989: 211; 1992b; Bassir 2014; Bassir ed. 2019). They were written in a form that fused genres such as narrative, wisdom literature, funerary literature, and wishes for the afterlife. Self-presentations can be classified into two main types: 1) idealized self-presentations, which present the protagonist as living in perfect accordance with the moral concept of maat; and 2) event-based self-presentations, which reveal significant events the protagonist witnessed or experienced in his professional career, and from which history can often be derived.

Self-presentations were produced by the full spectrum of officials, from low ranking to high, including priests, artists, physicians, and military officers of varying ranks, as well as the administrative state officials who supervised the royal court, Egypt’s borders, and Nubia. In the Middle Kingdom, especially, a good number of middle-ranking officials (and soldiers) recounted their exploits; indeed, most self-presentations that have come down to us are those of (male) officials. Self-presentations of women were not documented until the Late Period (see Jansen-Winkel 2004).

The primary intent of self-presentations was the representation of their subject in accordance with the beliefs of the elite class. In the Ramesside and Late Periods, for example, self-presentations often focused on highlighting the pious devotion of the protagonist before his or her deities, family, community, and future generations so that he or she would be—and remain—commemorated. It should be noted that a good number of self-presentations from the Pharaonic Period were more concerned with the protagonist's devotion to the crown.

Figure 1. Wooden panel of Hesi-Ra in the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, CG 1427.

Diachronic Presentations of the Non-royal Self

Although their origins likely stem from at least the Early Dynastic Period (Baines 1999; Edel 1944), the earliest known Egyptian non-royal self-presentations date to the Old Kingdom (2670 – 2168 BCE). One example is the Third Dynasty decorated wooden panel of physician Hesi-Ra (fig. 1), which was found in his mastaba S-2405 in Saqqara and depicts him at some stages of his life.

In the self-presentation text in his tomb at Giza (G8090), Fourth Dynasty official Debehen reports that his tomb was constructed as a personal favor from King Menkaura; as such, Debehen's text is the first known self-presentation to record a specific event in the life of the protagonist. His htp dj njsw formula, which depicts him with his titles above the tomb's entrance (fig. 2), itself constitutes a type of self-presentation (albeit a silent one), since his titles convey information about him (Lapp 1986; Baines 1997).

The self-presentations of the Fifth Dynasty are particularly informative for their outline of the interactive relationship between the king and the non-royal elite protagonist; this interaction constitutes the subject matter of the self-presentational text. From the end of the Fifth Dynasty and continuing through the Sixth Dynasty, self-presentations detail their protagonists' careers, including the reigns and state of affairs of the kings under whom they served. The self-presentations of the Sixth Dynasty, especially, reveal the achievements of their owners; as such, they are the forerunners of the laudatory self-presentations of the First Intermediate Period. The Sixth Dynasty self-presentation of the court official Weni, from Abydos (fig. 3), states: "When there was a secret charge in the royal harem against Queen Weret-yamtes, his majesty made me go in to hear (it) alone. No chief judge and vizier, no official was there, only I alone; because I was worthy, because I was rooted in his majesty's heart; because his majesty had filled his heart with me. Only I put (it) in writing together with one other senior warden of Nekhen, while my rank was (only) that of overseer of [royal tenants]. Never before had one like me heard a secret of the king's harem; but his majesty made me hear it, because I was worthy in his majesty's heart beyond any official of his, beyond any noble of his, beyond any servant of his" (Lichtheim 2006a: 19).

Figure 2. The ḥtp dj njsw formula above the entrance to the tomb of Debehen, Giza.

Figure 3. Stela of Weni the Elder in the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, CGC 1435.

Self-presentations of the First Intermediate Period (2168 – 1990 BCE) reveal Egypt’s political fragmentation. The competing nomarchs of the state expressed in their self-presentations their need to appear as successful rulers of Egypt and, in so doing, echoed the achievement-oriented self-presentations of the Sixth Dynasty. The self-presentation of Ankhtifi from Mo’alla, for example, states: “Horus brought me to the nome of Edfu for life, prosperity, health, to reestablish it, and I did (it). For Horus wished it to be reestablished, because he brought me to it to reestablish it” (Lichtheim 2006a: 85).

Upon the reunification of Egypt (2040 BCE) at the beginning of the Middle Kingdom the self-presentational tone changed, giving birth to the “encomiastic autobiography” (Gnirs 2001: 187), based upon the protagonists’ ethical merits (Janssen 1946; Lichtheim 1992b; Perdu 1995: 2249; Franke 1997). This new type of text presented the ideals and needs of the class of new officials who had restored Egypt to a single monarchy. Loyalty to the crown remained a prominent feature of these texts, whose non-royal elite protagonists had played a vital role in achieving Egypt’s stability and consolidation (Gnirs 2001: 187), as is exemplified in the self-presentation of Ikhnofret from Abydos: “I did all that his majesty commanded in executing my lord’s command for his father Osiris, Foremost-of-the-Westerners, lord of Abydos, great power in the nome of This. I acted as “his beloved son” for Osiris, Foremost-of-the-Westerners. I furnished his great bark, the eternal everlasting one. I made for him the portable shrine that carries the beauty of the Foremost-of-the-Westerners, of gold, silver, lapis lazuli, bronze, ssndm-wood, and cedar wood. The gods who attend him were fashioned; their shrines were made anew. I made the hour-priests [diligent] at their tasks; I made them know the ritual of every day and of the feasts of the beginnings of the seasons” (Lichtheim 2006a: 124).

The Second Intermediate Period (1640 – 1548 BCE) was a time of political, social, and economic crisis. The self-presentations of the period allude to that crisis through their portrayal of individuals who appear independent and self-confident, thereby revealing the prevailing weakness of Egypt’s central administration (Kubisch 2008 and 2010).

Figure 4. Statue of Amenhotep, Son of Hapu, in the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, Luxor J.4/Cairo JE 44862.

Starting from the New Kingdom (1548 – 1086 BCE), non-royal self-presentations contain a wide range of historical material due to Egypt’s expeditions into Asia and Africa. The military campaigns in Western Asia likely constitute a new development in the period, as does the extent of Egyptian presence in East Africa, though Egypt had long coveted its products (Rickal 2005; Simmance 2014; Perdu 1995: 2251; Guksch 1994; Hermann 1940; Schade-Busch 1997; Maderna-Sieben 1997). The scribal statue of Amenhotep, Son of Hapu (fig. 4), is one of the most well-known self-presentations of the Eighteenth Dynasty. It represents the seated Amenhotep in full maturity, in his capacity as a scribe, with hieroglyphic texts mentioning his campaign to Nubia inscribed on his lap and on the statue plinth. The self-presentation at Elkab of Ahmose, son of Abana, who served under a succession of pharaohs in the 17th to 18th Dynasties, states: “Now when I had established a household, I was taken to the ship ‘Northern,’ because I was brave. I followed the sovereign on foot when he rode about on his chariot. When the town of Avaris was besieged, I fought bravely on foot in his majesty’s presence. Thereupon I was appointed on the ship ‘Rising in Memphis.’ Then there was fighting on the water in ‘Pjedku’ of Avaris. I made a seizure and carried off a hand. When it was reported to the royal herald the gold of valor was given to me” (Lichtheim 2006b: 12). The text of Ahmose’s self-presentation thus provides an element of historical documentation of Egypt’s military conflict with the Hyksos. Self-presentations from the Amarna Period are rare (Sandman 1938; Murnane 1995; Gnirs 1996: 230 - 233; 2001: 187; Guksch 1994: 29 - 39, 62 - 65, 73 - 77). The Ramesside self-presentations, some of them notable for their location within temples, demonstrate a heightened regard for funerary customs and beliefs—a phenomenon that endured through the Third Intermediate and Late Periods (Frood 2007).

In the Third Intermediate Period (1086 – 664 BCE), the textual compositions of self-presentations revealed a broadening of the protagonists’ concepts of personal piety and individual religious performance (Perdu 1995: 2252; Jansen-Winkeln 2007 a and b; Frood 2013). In the Twenty-fifth (Kushite) Dynasty, for example, the social and thematic variety of self-presentation was elaborated, recreating features produced in earlier periods, but with remarkable characteristics (Jansen-Winkeln 2009; Zibelius-Chen 1997; Gnirs 2001: 187 - 188), such as the absence of royal names in the non-royal self-presentations in Egypt; the absence of genealogy in the records of Kushite immigrants in Egypt; and the absence of biographical inscriptions and statuary for non-royal protagonists in Nubia (Pope 2019: 201 - 202). In the following elaborate self-presentation text on the Theban block statue of Twenty-fifth Dynasty official Harwa, it is notable that no royal name is mentioned: “My Lady made me great when I was a small boy, she advanced my position when I was a child. The King sent me on missions as a youth, Horus, Lord of the Palace, distinguished me. Every mission on which their majesties sent me, I accomplished it correctly, and never told a lie about it. I did not rob, I did no wrong, I maligned no one before them. I entered the Presence to resolve difficulties, to assist the unfortunate. I have given goods to the have-not, I endowed the orphan in my town. My reward is being remembered for my beneficence, my ka enduring because of my kindness—Harwa” (Lichtheim 2006c: 27-28).

A phenomenon of Late Period (664 – 332 BCE) self-presentations is a marked rise of individualism, as exhibited in the self-presentation of Montemhet, who held, among other titles, that of Governor of Upper Egypt. His text, inscribed on his statue (Berlin Museum 17271), states: “I was count of the Theban nome, and all of Upper Egypt was in my charge, the southern boundary being at Yebu, the northern one at Un. I bestowed my benefits on Upper Egypt, my love on Lower Egypt; the citizens longed to see me, like Re when he shows himself, so great was my beneficence, so exalted was my excellence!” (Lichtheim 2006c: 32). It is furthermore during the Late Period that the first known self-presentations by women appeared (Jansen-Winkeln 2004).

The Saite Period in Egypt (664 – 525 BCE) was a time of huge political change in which the non-royal elite enjoyed a prestige that had normally been restricted to royalty in earlier periods of more centralized authority. Saite self-presentations mirror the continued rise of individualism (Perdu 1995: 2252 - 2253; Jansen-Winkeln 2014; Rössler-Köhler 1991; Heise: 2007). For example, the Saite self-presentation of Neshor named Psamtikmenkhib is a remarkable display of autonomy. Inscribed on the back pillar of his statue Louvre A90 (Bassir 2016) (fig. 5), Neshor’s self-presentation text narrates his activities at Elephantine in late Saite Egypt, especially his role in the mercenaries' revolt against King Apries early in the king's reign, and also sheds light on unnamed affairs taking place in the south (Bassir 2014: 38; 2016: 66 - 95). The Late-Period self-presentation of Payeftjauemawyneith, inscribed on his statue from Abydos (Louvre A93), provides a similar affirmation of authority: "I built the temple of Khentamenti, as a solid work of eternity, at his majesty's command, that he might see prosperity in the affairs of Tawer" (Lichtheim 2006c: 34). Significantly, the name of Saite king Amasis (Ahmose II) is featured only once, at the end of Payeftjauemawyneith's self-presentation (see Bassir 2015).

Figure 5. Statue Louvre A 90 of Neshor named Psamtikmenkhib.

Non-royal self-presentations demonstrate, historically, how the relationship between kings and non-royal elites changed over time. In some periods, self-presentations mirrored the rising power of non-royal elite individuals who presented themselves as highly independent and possessed of a king-like autonomy (see Lichtheim 2006b: 4; Baines 1995 a and b; 1996; Leprohon 1995; Gundlach 1997 a and b; 1998). Self-presentations can thus provide insight into the nature of Egyptian kingship and, moreover, documentation of the relationship between the crown and nobles, the king occupying a preeminent place in protagonists' texts during periods of strong rule and relegated to a brief mention, or none at all, in times of waning royal authority.

Self-presentations allow us to see their protagonists as multifaceted individuals. Reflected in their self-presentations are not only how the protagonists understood themselves but also their rulers, deities, and cultural traditions, intertwined as they were in the individuals' life, career, and afterlife. The genre of self-presentation is rightfully established in the spectrum of Egyptian literary and aesthetic traditions.

Bibliographic Notes

For the definition of the self, see Olshen (2001) and Ames (2001). For more on the history and origin of self-presentation in ancient Egypt, see Misch (1951: 20 - 46). For an overview and historical survey of the genre of self-presentation from the Old Kingdom to the Late Period, see Gnirs (1996 and 2001); Perdu (1995); Kubisch (2008); Frood (2007); Bassir (2014); and Jansen-Winkel (2004). For examples from different historical periods, see Sethe (1906 – 1909), (1932 – 1933), and (1935); Roccati (1982); Schenkel (1965); Lichtheim (1988); Helck (1983 and 1955 – 1958); Kitchen (1968 – 1990 and 1993); Rickal (2005); Jansen-Winkel (1985); Otto (1954); and Heise (2007). For more on self-presentation in ancient Egypt, see Van de Walle (1975); Lichtheim (1988, 1992 a and b); Vernus (1995); Naguib (1997); Assmann (1983 and 1987); Stauder-Porchet (2017); Kloth (2018); Bassir (2019); and the recent publication by Stauder-Porchet, Frood, and Stauder (2020).

References

- Ames, Deborah Lee
2001 Survival and life writing. In Encyclopedia of life writing: Autobiographical and biographical forms, Vol. 2, ed. Margaretta Jolly, pp. 854 - 856. London and Chicago: Fitzroy Dearborn.
- Assmann, Jan
1983 Schrift, Tod und Identität: Das Grab als Vorschule der Literatur im alten Ägypten. In Schrift und Gedächtnis: Beiträge zur Archäologie der literarischen Kommunikation, ed. Aleida Assmann, Jan Assmann, and Christof Hardmeier, pp. 64 - 93. München: Fink.
1987 Sepulkrale Selbstthematization im Alten Ägypten. In Selbstthematization und Selbstzeugnis: Bekenntnis und Geständnis, ed. Alois Hahn and Volker Kapp, pp. 196 - 222. Frankfurt am Main: Suhrkamp.
1996 Preservation and presentation of self in ancient Egyptian portraiture. In Studies in honor of William Kelly Simpson, Vol. 1, ed. Peter Der Manuelian, pp. 55 - 81. Boston: Museum of Fine Arts.
- Baines, John
1995a Kingship, definition of culture, and legitimation. In Ancient Egyptian kingship, Probleme der Ägyptologie 9, ed. David O'Connor and David Silverman, pp. 3 - 47. Leiden: Brill.
1995b Origins of Egyptian kingship. In Ancient Egyptian kingship, Probleme der Ägyptologie 9, ed. David O'Connor and David Silverman, pp. 95 - 156. Leiden: Brill.
1996 On the composition and inscriptions of the Vatican Statue of Udjahorresne. In Studies in honor of William Kelly Simpson, Vol. 1, ed. Peter Der Manuelian, pp. 83 - 92. Boston: Museum of Fine Arts.
1997 Kingship before literature: The world of the king in the Old Kingdom. In Selbstverständnis und Realität: Akten des Symposiums zur ägyptischen Königsideologie in Mainz 15. – 17.6.1995, ed. Rolf Gundlach and Christine Raedler, pp. 125 - 174. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
1999 Forerunners of narrative biographies. In Studies on ancient Egypt in honour of H. S. Smith, ed. Anthony Leahy and John Tait, pp. 23 - 37. London: Egypt Exploration Society.
2004 Egyptian elite self-presentation in the context of Ptolemaic rule. In Ancient Alexandria between Egypt and Greece, ed. William V. Harris and Giovanni Ruffini, pp. 33 - 61. Leiden and Boston: Brill.
- Bassir, Hussein
2014 Image and voice in Saite Egypt: Self-Presentation of Neshor named Psamtikmenkhib and Payeftjaumawyneith, Wilkinson Egyptology Series 2. Tucson, AZ: University of Arizona Egyptian Expedition.
2015 On the historical implications of Payeftjaumawyneith's self-presentation on Louvre A 93. In Joyful in Thebes: Egyptological studies in honor of Betsy M. Bryan, ed. Richard Jasnow and Kathlyn M. Cooney, pp. 21 - 35. Atlanta: Lockwood Press.
2016 Neshor at Elephantine in Late Saite Egypt. Journal of Egyptian History 9(1), pp. 66 - 95.

- Bassir, Hussein (ed.)
2019 Living forever: Self-presentation in ancient Egypt. Cairo and New York: American University in Cairo Press.
- Edel, Elmar
1944 Untersuchungen zur Phraseologie der ägyptischen Inschriften des Alten Reiches. Mitteilungen des Deutschen Instituts für Ägyptische Altertumskunde in Kairo 13, pp. 1 - 90.
- Franke, Detlef
1997 "Schöpfer, Schützer, Guter Hirte": Zum Königsbild des Mittleren Reiches. In Selbstverständnis und Realität: Akten des Symposiums zur ägyptischen Königsideologie in Mainz 15. – 17.6.1995, ed. Rolf Gundlach and Christine Raedler, pp. 175 - 209. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- Frood, Elizabeth
2007 Biographical texts from Ramessid Egypt, ed. John Baines. Writings from the Ancient World 26. Leiden and Boston: Brill.
2013 Sensual devotions: Sensuous experience, performance, and presence in Third Intermediate Period biography. In Ancient Egyptian literature: Theory and practice, ed. Roland Enmarch and Verena Lepper, pp. 153 - 184. Oxford: Oxford University Press.
- Gnirs, Andrea Maria
1996 Die ägyptische Autobiographie. In Ancient Egyptian literature: History and forms, ed. Antonio Loprieno, pp. 191 - 241. Leiden, New York, and Köln: Brill.
2001 Biographies. In The Oxford encyclopedia of ancient Egypt, Vol. 1, ed. Donald Redford, pp. 184 - 189. New York: Oxford University Press.
- Greenstein, Edward
1995 Autobiographies in ancient Western Asia. In Civilizations of the ancient Near East, Vol. 4, ed. Jack Sasson, John Baines, Gary Beckman, and Karen Robinson, pp. 2421 - 2432. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.
- Guksch, Heike
1994 Königsdienst: Zur Selbstdarstellung der Beamten in der 18. Dynastie. Heidelberg: Heidelberger Orientverlag.
- Gundlach, Rolf
1997a Zu Inhalt und Bedeutung der ägyptischen Königsideologie. In Selbstverständnis und Realität: Akten des Symposiums zur ägyptischen Königsideologie in Mainz 15. – 17.6.1995, ed. Rolf Gundlach and Christine Raedler, pp. 1 - 8. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
1997b Die Legitimationen des ägyptischen Königs: Versuch einer Systematisierung. In Selbstverständnis und Realität: Akten des Symposiums zur ägyptischen Königsideologie in Mainz 15. – 17.6.1995, ed. Rolf Gundlach and Christine Raedler, pp. 11 - 20. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
1998 Der Pharao und sein Staat: Die Grundlegung der ägyptischen Königsideologie im 4. und 3. Jahrtausend. Darmstadt: Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft.
- Gunzenhauser, Bonnie
2001 Autobiography: General survey. In Encyclopedia of life writing: Autobiographical and biographical forms, Vol. 1, ed. Margaretta Jolly, pp. 75 - 78. London and Chicago: Fitzroy Dearborn.
- Heise, Jens
2007 Erinnern und Gedenken: Aspekte der biographischen Inschriften der ägyptischen Spätzeit. Orbis Biblicus et Orientalis 226. Fribourg: Academic Press; Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.
- Helck, Wolfgang
1955- Urkunden der 18. Dynastie (Urk. IV 17 – 22: 1955 - 1958). Urkunden des ägyptischen Altertums. Leipzig: Hinrichs.
1983 Historisch-biographische Texte der 2. Zwischenzeit und neue Texte der 18. Dynastie. 2nd revised edition. Kleine ägyptische Texte 6(1). Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- Hermann, Alfred
1940 Die Stelen der thebanischen Felsgräber der 18. Dynastie. Ägyptologische Forschungen 11. Glückstadt: Augustin.
- Hoberman, Ruth
2001 Biography: General survey. In Encyclopedia of life writing: Autobiographical and biographical forms, Vol. 1, ed. Margaretta Jolly, pp. 109 - 112. London and Chicago: Fitzroy Dearborn.
- Jansen-Winkel, Karl
1985 Ägyptische Biographien der 22. und 23. Dynastie. 3 volumes. Ägypten und Altes Testament 8. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.

- 2004 Bemerkungen zu den Frauenbiographien der Spätzeit. Altorientalische Forschungen 31(2), pp. 358 - 373.
- 2007a Inschriften der Spätzeit, Teil I: Die 21. Dynastie. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- 2007b Inschriften der Spätzeit, Teil II: Die 22. - 24. Dynastie. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- 2009 Inschriften der Spätzeit, Teil III: Die 25. Dynastie. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- 2014 Inschriften der Spätzeit, Teil IV: Die 26. Dynastie. 2 volumes. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- Janssen, Jozef Marie Antoon
1946 De traditioneele Egyptische autobiographie vóór het Nieuwe Rijk. 2 volumes. Leiden: Brill.
- Jolly, Margaretta
2001 Editor's note. In Encyclopedia of life writing: Autobiographical and biographical forms, Vol. 1, ed. Margaretta Jolly, pp. ix-xii. London and Chicago: Fitzroy Dearborn.
- Kitchen, Kenneth
1968- Rameside inscriptions: Historical and biographical. 8 volumes (1968 – 1990). Oxford: Blackwell.
1993 Rameside inscriptions translated and annotated: Notes and comments I: Ramesses I, Sethos I, and contemporaries. Oxford and Cambridge, MA: Blackwell.
- Kloth, Nicole
2018 Quellentexte zur ägyptischen Sozialgeschichte I: Autobiographien des Alten Reichs und der Ersten Zwischenzeit, 2nd ed. Einführungen und Quellentexte zur Ägyptologie 12. Münster: Lit.
- Kubisch, Sabine
2008 Lebensbilder der 2. Zwischenzeit: Biographische Inschriften der 13. - 17. Dynastie. Sonderschrift, Deutsches Archäologisches Institut, Abteilung Kairo 34. Berlin and New York: de Gruyter.
2010 Biographies of the Thirteenth to Seventeenth Dynasties. In The Second Intermediate Period (Thirteenth – Seventeenth Dynasties), ed. Marcel Marée, pp. 313 - 327. Leuven: Peeters.
- Lapp, Günther
1986 Die Opferformel des Alten Reiches: Unter Berücksichtigung einiger späterer Formen. Sonderschrift, Deutsches Archäologisches Institut, Abteilung Kairo 21. Mainz: Zabern.
- Leprohon, Ronald
1995 Royal ideology and state administration in pharaonic Egypt. In Civilizations of the ancient Near East, Vol. 1, ed. Jack Sasson, John Baines, Gary Beckman, and Karen Robinson, pp. 273 - 287. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.
- Lichtheim, Miriam
1988 Ancient Egyptian autobiographies chiefly of the Middle Kingdom: A study and an anthology. Orbis Biblicus et Orientalis 84. Fribourg: Academic Press; Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.
1989 The stela of Taniy, CG 20564: Its date and its character. Studien zur Altägyptischen Kultur 16, pp. 203 - 215.
1992a Autobiography as self-exploration. In Sesto Congresso Internazionale di Egittologia: Atti, Vol. 1, pp. 409 - 414. Turin: International Association of Egyptologists.
1992b Maat in Egyptian autobiographies and related studies. Orbis Biblicus et Orientalis 120. Fribourg: Academic Press; Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht.
2006a Ancient Egyptian literature I: The Old and Middle Kingdoms (with a new foreword by Antonio Loprieno). Berkeley, Los Angeles, and London: University of California Press.
2006b Ancient Egyptian literature II: The New Kingdom (with a foreword by Hans W. Fischer-Elfert). Berkeley, Los Angeles, and London: University of California Press.
2006c Ancient Egyptian literature III: The Late Period (with a new foreword by Joseph G. Manning). Berkeley, Los Angeles, and London: University of California Press.
- Maderna-Sieben, Claudia
1997 Der König als Kriegsherr und oberster Heerführer in den Eulogien der frühen Ramessidenzeit. In Selbstverständnis und Realität: Akten des Symposiums zur ägyptischen Königsideologie in Mainz 15. – 17.6.1995, ed. Rolf Gundlach and Christine Raedler, pp. 49 - 79. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- Misch, Georg
1951 A history of autobiography in antiquity. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.
- Murnane, William
1995 Texts from the Amarna Period in Egypt, ed. Edmund S. Meltzer. Writings from the Ancient World 5. Atlanta: Scholars Press.

- Naguib, Saphinaz-Amal
 1997 Mémoire de soi: Autobiographie et identité en ancienne Égypte. In Built on solid rock: Studies in honour of Professor Ebbe Egede Knudsen on the occasion of his 65th birthday, April 11th 1997, ed. Elie Wardini, pp. 216 - 225. Oslo: Novus.
- Olney, James
 1980 Autobiography and the cultural moment: A thematic, historical, and bibliographical introduction. In Autobiography: Essays theoretical and critical, ed. James Olney, pp. 3 - 27. Princeton: Princeton University Press.
- Olshen, Barry
 2001 The self. In Encyclopedia of life writing: Autobiographical and biographical forms, Vol. 2, ed. Margaretta Jolly, pp. 799 - 801. London and Chicago: Fitzroy Dearborn.
- Otto, Eberhard
 1954 Die biographischen Inschriften der ägyptischen Spätzeit: Ihre geistesgeschichtliche und literarische Bedeutung. Leiden: Brill.
- Perdu, Olivier
 1995 Ancient Egyptian autobiographies. In Civilizations of the ancient Near East, Vol. 4, ed. Jack Sasson, John Baines, Gary Beckman, and Karen Robinson, pp. 2243 - 2254. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.
- Pope, Jeremy
 2019 Self-Presentation in the Twenty-Fifth Dynasty. In Living forever: Self-Presentation in ancient Egypt, ed. Hussein Bassir, pp. 191 - 206. Cairo and New York: American University in Cairo Press.
- Rickal, Elsa
 2005 Les Épithètes dans les autobiographies de particuliers du Nouvel Empire égyptien. 2 volumes. Ph.D. dissertation, Université Paris IV-Sorbonne.
- Roccati, Alessandro
 1982 La littérature historique sous l'ancien empire égyptien. Paris: Éditions du Cerf.
- Rößler-Köhler, Ursula
 1991 Individuelle Haltungen zum ägyptischen Königtum der Spätzeit: Private Quellen und ihre Königswertung im Spannungsfeld zwischen Erwartung und Erfahrung. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- Sandman, Maj
 1938 Texts from the time of Akhenaten. Brussels: Fondation égyptologique Reine Élisabeth.
- Schade-Busch, Mechthild
 1997 Bemerkungen zum Königsbild Thutmosis' III. In Selbstverständnis und Realität: Akten des Symposiums zur ägyptischen Königsideologie in Mainz 15. – 17.6.1995, ed. Rolf Gundlach and Christine Raedler, pp. 211 - 223. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- Schenkel, Wolfgang
 1965 Memphis, Herakleopolis, Theben: Die epigraphischen Zeugnisse der 7. – 11. Dynastie Ägyptens. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.
- Sethe, Kurt
 1906- Urkunden der 18. Dynastie (Urk. IV, 1 – 16: 1906 - 1909). Urkunden des ägyptischen Altertums. Leipzig: Hinrichs.
 1932- Urkunden des Alten Reiches (Urk. I: 1932 – 1933). Urkunden des ägyptischen Altertums. Leipzig: Hinrichs.
 1935 Historisch-biographische Urkunden des Mittleren Reiches (Urk. VII). Urkunden des ägyptischen Altertums. Leipzig: Hinrichs.
- Simmance, Eleanor Beth
 2014 Amenhotep son of Hapu: Self-Presentation through statues and their texts in pursuit of semi-divine intermediary status. Master's Thesis, University of Birmingham.
- Simpson, William Kelly
 1982 Egyptian sculpture and two-dimensional representation as propaganda. Journal of Egyptian Archaeology 68, pp. 266 - 271.
- Stauder-Porchet, Julie
 2017 Les autobiographies de l'ancien empire égyptien: Étude sur la naissance d'un genre. Orientalia Lovaniensia Analecta 255. Leuven: Peeters.

Stauder-Porchet, Julie, Elizabeth Froid, and Andréas Stauder (eds.)

2020 Ancient Egyptian biographies: Contexts, forms, functions. Wilbour Studies in Egyptology and Assyriology 6. Atlanta: Lockwood.

Van de Walle, Baudouin

1975 Biographie. In Lexikon der Ägyptologie, Vol. 1 (columns 815 - 821), ed. Wolfgang Helck and Eberhard Otto. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz.

Vernus, Pascal

1995 Essai sur la conscience de l'histoire dans l'Égypte pharaonique. Paris: H. Champion.

Zibelius-Chen, Karola

1997 Theorie und Realität im Königtum der 25. Dynastie. In Selbstverständnis und Realität: Akten des Symposiums zur ägyptischen Königsideologie in Mainz 15. – 17.6.1995, ed. Rolf Gundlach and Christine Raedler, pp. 81 - 95. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz

Image Credits

Figure 1. Wooden panel of Hesy-Ra in the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, CG 1427. (Photograph by Sameh Abdel Mohsen © Egyptian Museum in Cairo.)

Figure 2. The hwp dj njsw formula above the entrance to the tomb of Debehen, Giza. (Photograph by the author.)

Figure 3. Stela of Weni the Elder in the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, CGC 1435. (Photograph by Ahmed Amin © Egyptian Museum in Cairo.)

Figure 4. Statue of Amenhotep, Son of Hapu, in the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, Luxor J.4/Cairo JE 44862. (Photograph by Sandro Vannini/Laboratoriorosso.)

Figure 5. Statue Louvre A 90 of Neshor named Psamtikmenkhib. (Photograph © 2008 Musée du Louvre, dist. RMN-Grand Palais/Georges Poncet.)